CalTrans jumped on that light

LIVERMORE — State transportation officials last week went right to work on a study of the "Tony Thomas Traffic Light" proposal — even before a report from City Manager Bill Parness reached them.

Impetus for the traffic light request at Holmes Street and Vancouver Way was the recent pedestrian death of eight year old Tony Thomas who was walking his bicycle across the street when hit by a truck.

Thousands of people signed petitions asking the city to get a light there as soon as possible.

City Council May 2 gave its staff the go ahead to take the necessary traffic volume counts before requesting a light from CalTrans, which is responsible for Holmes St., a state highway.

Even while the public works department was setting up the necessary equipment for the traffic count, and accident statistics were being compiled, a Lawrence Livermore Laboratory transportation specialist was discussing the proposal with his former CalTrans coworkers.

Don Torluemke, LLL transportation coordinator and former CalTrans electrical traffic signal designer, said "they were very understanding, very supportive about it."

"They got right on it," he beamed.

The city submitted a report showing volume in an effort to prove the light is justified, said Torluemke, noting that CalTrans uses a criteria list with eight reasons to require a light.

"This light meets the warrants for minimum vehicle volume, interruption of continuous traffic from side street traffic and apparently for school crossings," he said.

CalTrans investigators were in Livermore two days last week to perform 12 hour traffic counts.

"Every movement, left turns, every lane, was studied," said Torluemke. "CalTrans must now analyze the data and city and state officials will have to agree on cost participation."

Because CalTrans has a number of signals under design now and is "swamped", The LLL transportation coordinator offered his services to expedite the design work and "get it in sooner."

He still thinks it will take a minimum of six months, though. "It seems like a long time but there are many steps and six months is a very realistic minimum."

He estimated cost at $75,000, with the possibility of salvaging light standard poles and other parts to lower the cost.

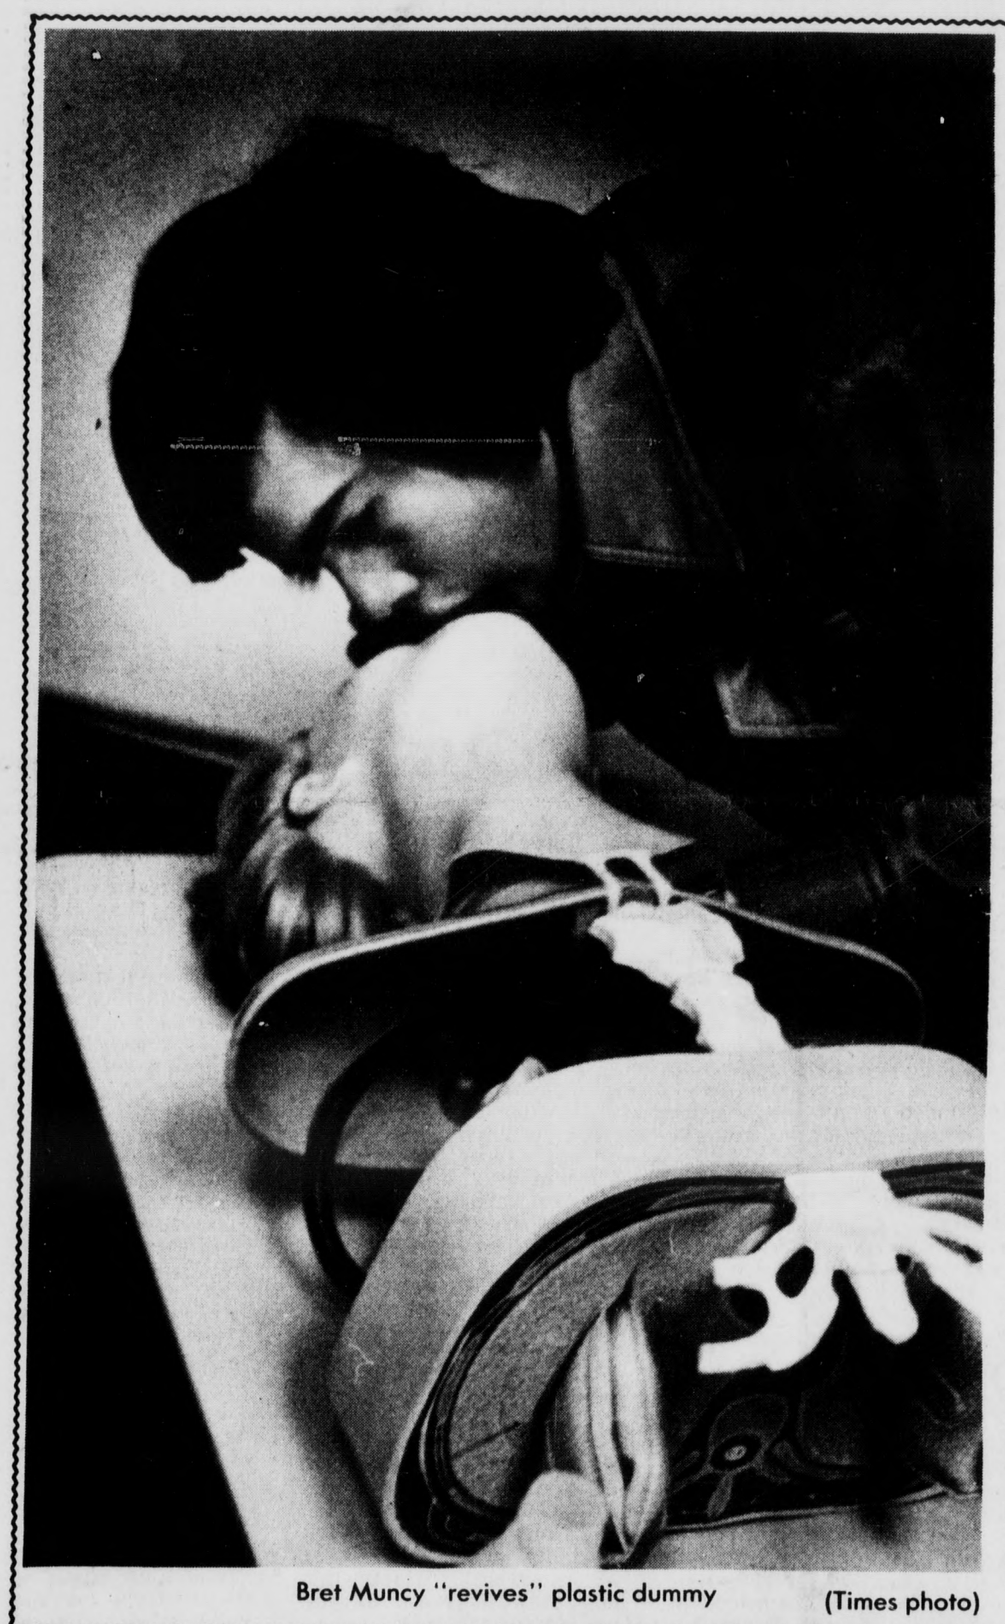

"A lot of the cost is the contractor's labor; we can't do it for $8,000," he said, noting comments by some petitioners that the new light at Vasco Road and East Avenue cost that much.

The Vasco light was described by him as a temporary and simple light without the sophisticated controller necessary to run pedestrian and left turn cycles.

"Just the box with the electronics that run the signal will cost $12,000, he said.

When told of the quick CalTrans action, Parness said, "Good, that's fine. I hope they have a favorable report to give us."

First step of a massive lifesaver plan

SAN RAMON — It's starting small — very small — but an area - wide effort to teach the population emergency lifesaving techniques is underway.

Twice as many people as planned for showed up yesterday at the Family Medical Center on Alcosta Boulevard for the first half of a six - hour course in cardio - pulmonary resuscitation (CPR.) Participants ranged in age from a teen - aged student to a gray - hair elderly woman. Most seemed to be motivated by the desire to know how to revive an accident, heart attack or drowning victim if the need arose.

"I just read about this class yesterday," Bret Muncy revealed, "and decided to show up. I work at Straw Hat Pizza and ... well, you never know when you'll need it."

Linda Thurlow carefully shook her plastic - dummy "victim," as suggested by the instructor, then tilted its head back to "clear the airway." Pinching off the nostrils, she puffed into its mouth and watched with satisfaction as the plastic "lungs" inflated and deflated.

Later she said, "I'm just doing this because if somebody keeled over in front of me I'd never forgive myself if I couldn't revive him just because I hadn't bothered to learn how. I've been meaning to take this class for a long time."

According to instructor Jon R. Ulricksen of the Valley Community Services fire department, the goal is to teach "everybody in town" the lifesaving CPR technique — which is not simple and which requires great exertion on the part of the rescuer.

Rare survivor

Little Jennifer beats a deadly liver disease

OAKLAND (AP) — Little Jennifer Castillo was so sick that her mother, facing up to reality, made arrangements to donate her year-old baby's kidneys.

Now Jennifer is home, standing and crawling and gaining weight, after winning a month - long fight with a mysterious disease that claims the lives of 75 per cent of its young victims.

Doctors at Children's Hospital Medical Center here think Jennifer had Reyes Syndrome, a rare, fast-developing liver disease that usually follows a mild virus infection.

A hospital spokeswoman said Monday that Jennifer had been running a mild fever for a few days when suddenly her temperature shot up and she began vomiting out of control.

On advice of doctors, her mother, Esther Castillo, treated her at home in Livermore for four days with aspirin and sponge baths before taking her to the hospital, where she slipped into a coma.

"No one would look at me," recalled Mrs. Castillo. "No one would talk to me. I know it was because they thought she was going to die."

Jennifer, under the care of Drs. Robert Dobrin and William Liebman, was in a coma and on a respirator 10 days. During that time, said the hospital spokeswoman, she had pneumonia, anemia, jaundice and swelling of her liver. Her brain practically stopped working.

All the doctors could do was treat the symptoms with procedures to remove the poisons building up in her system because her failing liver wasn't able to remove them. She had six complete blood transfusions. She stopped breathing again, and her mother, dozing in a waiting room, heard the "Code Blue" broadcast over the hospital's public address system.

"I just knew it was Jennifer and I ran in," said Mrs. Castillo. "I saw doctors all around her, pounding her

Local runner dies in Bay race

John Holewinski of the Valley Pioneer in Danville never made it to the ocean in Sunday's "Bay to Breakers" race. He died at the U.S. Health Hospital before the last of 12,000 runners crossed the line.

It was a long, hot run over the 7.6-mile course through the streets of San Francisco. One hundred twelve joggers had to be treated for dehydration.

Co-workers at the Valley Pioneer where Holewinski worked for the past year and three months, said he had talked about running in the race for two weeks.

The 24-year-old graduate of San Diego State worked in the display advertizing department.

Friends said he left for the race in a "good mood." His wife, Cecila and young son, Adam stayed behind.

He had already met the challenge of Hays Street hill and was coasting along with a thousand others determined to make the breakers before the clocked ticked past 11 o'clock.

Cruising down the curves of John F. Kennedy Drive in Golden Gate park, runners started shouting, "Move over to the side. Let the ambulance through."

A siren blew and the red lights flashed and then the sea of athletes pounding its way to the ocean parted. An ambulance careened through the crowd and piled up three runners when it abrubtly stopped.

John Holewinski collapsed with two miles left to go.

Cause of death has not been determined.

Santos Ranch Rd. dropped?

Santos Ranch Road, that snake-like trek up the west slope of the Pleasanton Ridge, faces possible abandonment by the county again. Acting public works director Edward Meyer is recommending to the board of supervisors that the road be legally abandoned and maintenance be turned over to property owners on the hill.

Supervisors will hear the request at this morning's meeting.

Mori for death bill

Assemblyman Floyd Mori, D., Pleasanton, was one of the Assembly members who cast a deciding vote on a bill to restore capital punishment in the state yesterday.

The vote was 54-23, the exact margin required for passage. The bill will permit capital punishment for only certain major crimes involving the death of the victims.

Buenas Vidas' future

A project dear to the heart of Livermore will occupy the attention of Pleasanton Chamber of Commerce members at noon today. Buenas Vidas Ranch, its activities and its future will be the topic for a luncheon gathering at Hap's Restaurant on Neal Street in Pleasanton. The public is invited to the no - host lunch.

Tax rate unsettled

City cuts budget

PLEASANTON — Cuts totaling close to $90,000 were made in the proposed 1977-78 city budget last night, but that doesn't mean that the city tax rate will be cut the equivalent five or six cents.

There are many factors still to be plugged into the budget, said director of finance Jim Walker.

For example, only yesterday morning Walker got word from the county assessor that the city's assessed valuations will be $122,000 higher than expected. However, that is only a preliminary estimate, Walker hastened to add.

The higher assessed valuation and the cuts last night make it look like the city is headed for a budget surplus, but the city council still must negotiate with city employes for the coming year's pay increases.

If the raises are higher than expected, they probably will eliminate that budget cushion.

Most of the savings effected last night centered around trimming the city utility bill by $46,000. The council would cut off 20 per cent of the city's street lights to accomplish it.

Newer neighborhoods, with their abundance of lights on each block, would bear the brunt of it.

The council asked the staff for a report on returning off even more lights, ranging up to the 40 per cent figure suggested by council member Frank Brandes.

Brandes was the lone "no" vote on the cuts approved last night. He objected because he wanted a bigger reduction on street lights and elimination of the projected position of assistant fire chief.

Brandes did succeed in axing the Department of Human Services four - days - per - week staff member worth $13,000 yearly with votes from William Herlihy and Ken Mercer.

Acceptance for Las Positas

SACRAMENTO — The Director of Transporation has accepted the Las Positas overcrossing as a state project for inclusion in the California Tranportation Department's Six Year Plan.

Adriana Gianturco has advised Assemblyman Floyd Mori (D — Pleasanton) of her "agreement" to Mori's earlier pitch for state participation in the project that would allow Las Positas Boulevard to cross over Interstate 680.

While noting "it is doubtful" that full state funding of the project will be possible, Gianturco noted "it is quite likely" Federal participation could be obtained to the extent that a pedestrian overcrossing would have been funded.

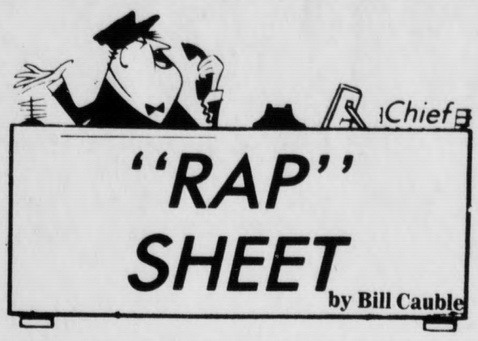

Floyd Mori

City of Pleasanton has been holding out for a full vehicular overcrossing and has agreed to put up money of its own in order to bring about that structure.

Mori, a former mayor of Pleasanton, agreed to carry that petition through the Assembly Ways and Means Committee, from where it was sent to CalTrans.

Early estimates pegged the full vehicular overcrossing at about $1.5 million, but that cost will likely exceed $2 million by the time the structure is built. There had been talk of the city advancing the full amount to speed the project, then wait for its refund from CalTrans.

76,000 firecrackers found in Dublin home

DUBLIN — Deputies armed with a search warrant seized an estimated 76,000 firecrackers from a Brighton Drive home Saturday afternoon.

Following up on information supplied by an informer, deputies discovered several cases of firecrackers in the living room. These included bottle rockets, roman candles, floral rockets and the more dangerous barrel bombs.

Despite the large number of devices, deputies said possession constituted only a misdemeanor due to their classification.

The district attorney's office is expected to file charges in the case this week.

A street could make history

LIVERMORE — The first Historic Preservation Zoning classification here may be given to the Trevarno Road area after a joint public hearing tonight of the planning commission and historic preservation committee considers a proposal to make that area an official landmark.

The stucco homes along the shade-tree-lined lane once housed executives of the Coast Manufacturing Company, which came to Livermore at the turn of the century to manufacture fuses and left in the 1960's.

The area is now zoned suburban residential.

The individual buildings "do not individually fit criteria ... for landmark status," notes Building Inspector Herb Street, but he outlined several reasons the area as a whole should be considered.

"The area exemplifies a particular way of life associated with a major industry of importance to the city," he said in a report to the planning commission. He also noted the area identifies with a number of civic and cultural leaders who contributed significantly to the development of the city.

Street will also ask planners to consider the question of incentives to property owners along Trevarno Road to accept the landmark designation. Noting federal and state proposed tax credit plans, he is asking the commission for "more direct incentive."

He is completing a survey of other communities to find what incentives they offer. The cities are Santa Cruz, Watsonville, Los Gatos, Benicia and Walnut Creek.

In other agenda items, planners will:

— Review the zoning requirements on a piece of land at Murdell Lane and Stanley Boulevard, possibly slated for eventual commercial development.

— Consider request by Jim's Texaco, 930 Springtown Blvd., for a conditional use permit to allow operation of a hauling equipment rental business.

Murray search hits road

Murray School District trustees will travel to either Orinda, Mountain View or Seattle tomorrow to meet with and observe their top choice for superintendent of the district.

Meeting initially with Local Advisory Committee members Friday night, the board reviewed the strengths and weaknesses of each of four finalists who spent a day in the district last week.

The finalists, in the order of their day in the district, included Dr. Floyd Davis of Seattle, Dr. Byron Antcliff of Huron School District, Michigan, Dr. William Grafft of Orinda and Dr. Jessie Kobayashi of Whisan School District in Mountain View.

There is some foundation for speculation that the two out-of-state finalists, Antcliff and Davis, may not be the top choice.

It was learned Monday that trustees hope to hold a closed session Wednesday to review their impressions after a day in the district of the top-ranked candidate. If so, it would seem unlikely that trustees could get to suburban Wayne County, Michigan and back Wednesday, or possibly even Seattle.

Trustees made brief mention of the selection process at a board meeting Monday night at Murray School.

It is known that if board members find some heretofore unknown or disturbing influences during their visit, they quite possibly will make a visitation to the home district of their second choice.

Otherwise, they will review their impressions Wednesday night or Thursday and come to a decision on when to offer that person a contract. The pay offer will be in the $32,000 to $35,000-per year range.

Complicating the final phase of the selection process is the fact that the leading candidate may be under consideration in other districts.

Clerk of the board Linda Jeffery told The Times Monday to the best of her knowledge, none of the four finalists had asked to be dropped from further consideration.

As now planned, announcement of Dr. Donald Williams' successor will be made at the board meeting of Monday, June 6.

Livermore precedent

Economic zoning to court

LIVERMORE — A local zoning decision three years ago that halted a planned shopping center at Portola Avenue and First Street may wind up in the state supreme court.

Attorneys for the Ensign Bickford Realty Corp. of Connecticut have filed a petition for a supreme court hearing, but do not expect an answer until June whether or not the court will hear arguments in the case.

A precedent setting appeals court ruling in favor of this city in March affirmed the legal right of local jurisdictions to use economic factors as a basis of planning and zoning, according to city attorney Gary Reiners.

Attorneys for the realtor do not quite agree.

The property, annexed to the city in 1968, was classified neighborhood commercial (CN), but the city rezoned it in 1974 for residential use only. When Bickford asked for rezoning back to CN, the planning commission refused, arguing the population base in that sector of Livermore was not adequate for that type of development.

Council backed the planners, noting an area of Springtown had already been set aside for CN zoning to permit a market there.

That market is now in the planning stages and is expected to be constructed sometime later this year.

The realtors took the city to Superior Court in Oakland and won a judgement that ordered the city to reconsider without giving weight to the Springtown factor, according to Lloyd Harris, Bickford's Livermore attorney.

"The Superior Court found the city council's action denied equal protection and due process of law," said Douglas Schwab, a San Francisco attorney who will argue the case if the supreme court decides to hear the case.

The court of appeals reversed that lower court ruling, however. Haines said the appeals court did not rule on the motives of the council, but only the form and procedure. "They called zoning a legislative function," he said.

"In our view the decision of the court of appeals was improper," said Schwab. "They applied an incorrect standard of judicial review of government action."

chest. I screamed, 'What are you doing to my baby?' but nobody had time to talk to me."

The medical team pulled Jennifer out of that crisis, and after that she began to improve. About a month later she was ready to go home.

Hospital officials say Jennifer apparently escaped the brain damage that can accompany conditions as serious as hers.

Jennifer, who cut two teeth in the hospital, recently celebrated her first birthday at home. "You'd never know she has been so sick," her mother said.

Knife robbery suspects face court charges

LIVERMORE — A man and woman accused of robbing the El Taco Restaurant in Dublin at knifepoint have been sent to superior court to face the charges.

Following a preliminary hearing here, Donnie Lee Smith, 27, and Cynthia Kay Davis, 20, both of Hayward, were scheduled for a May 25 hearing in Oakland. They were released on $7,500 bail.

Sheriff's deputies arrested the pair shortly after the April 23 theft. They have been accused of taking $600 from a safe they allegedly forced the manager to open. Customers in the store were reportedly forced into a back room.

In other court action:

— Jeffrey M. Carter, 23, of Walnut Creek and Gary Joseph Hall, 25, San Leandro, pleaded not guilty to charges of burglarizing the home of Ronald D. Holley, 7811 Bristol Rd., Dublin, March 13.

The pair are scheduled for a June 10 court appearance to schedule a preliminary hearing on charges they pried open a rear sliding glass door and removed stereo equipment.

A witness said he saw two men loading the equipment into a car parked in front of the house, then speed away without headlights.

— Albert Roy Weaser, 30, 4282 East Ave., Livermore, pleaded not guilty to charges of assault with a deadly weapon. He was taken into custody May 9 following a reported dispute with 18-year-old Jose Alberto Feliciano, 2317 Fourth St., according to police reports.

Weasor is scheduled for a pre-trial hearing June 2.

Transit team meets

LIVERMORE — The Valley Transportation Committee will meet with county officials tomorrow morning to tie in local needs with a transportation survey recently held by AC Transit Co. for Alameda County.

The meeting, scheduled for 9 a.m. at the Veterans Memorial Building, will involve citizen input from local cities, recreation departments, Garnet Austin Center, Volunteer Bureau, Valley Mental Health, Covenant Ministry Association and other agencies.

VTC is a loosely knit group that asked and received COVA sponsorship in applying for county money that would help expand AC Transit services for the handicapped and senior citizens in The Valley.

Tom McCormick, county revenue sharing coordinator, will be at the meeting to act as liaison between the various groups, AC Transit and the county.

County officials agreed to give $2,000 for the study if Livermore, Pleasanton and Union City each put up $500, according to Dee Manning of Livermore Area Recreation and Park District.

Rebates for elderly renters

The state's eligible older renters will join senior homeowners this year for the first time ever in receiving rebates on some of the property taxes they paid, Assemblyman Floyd Mori, D., Pleasanton, announced yesterday.

Beginning yesterday and running through. Aug. 31, senior renters and homeowners meeting certain qualifications can apply for the assistance through the Franchise Tax Board. Applications and help in filling them out is available through Mori's office at 1811 Santa Rita Road, Suite 228.

"For the first time, persons over 62 who rent their homes may be able to get back some of the rent they paid toward the landlord's tax bill," said Mori.

To qualify, a person must have been 62 or older on Jan. 1, 1977 and a California resident by that date who occupied a rented residence between July 1, 1976 and June 30, 1977, and did not have more than $5,000 household income for the 1976 calendar year.

The renters' assistance is in addition to the renter's credit allowed by the state on personal income taxes. Senior renters who receive welfare benefits also are eligible, said Mori.

Changes in the law also will make more senior homeowners eligible for rebates, he said. The income ceiling for eligibility has been raised from $10,000 to $12,000 a year. The amount of the refund will be on a percentage of the property tax levy on the first $8,500 of assessed value of the home, not on the first $7,500, as was used last year. This could raise the average refund from $176 to $220, according to the Franchise Tax Board.

Income limits for eligibility on the homeowners refund is $12,000 for the 1976 calendar year. Senior homeowners may be eligible for this assistance even if they claim the veterans' property tax exemption or the homeowners' property tax exemption. Checks will be mailed from both programs after July 1.

Lab engineer back from the classroom

Paul Price (right), a mechanical engineer at the Lawrence Livermore Laboratory, has traded his mechanical pencils for chalk and erasers to spend the year as a professor at Northern Arizona University. He is shown double-checking design specifications with NAU student Dave Duganne.

LIVERMORE — Last August mechanical engineer Paul Price traded clogged freeways of the Bay Area for the unpaved cinder roads of Flagstaff, Arizona as the first participant in a new professional exchange program between the Lawrence Livermore Laboratory and Northern Arizona University (NAU).

Price returns home to California this month after a year-long appointment as professor of engineering at NAU. The exchange program is sponsored by LLL, a national center for energy research and defense work that is funded by the Energy Research and Development Administration and operated by the University of California. The engineering exchange seems to offer something for everyone.

The engineering students at NAU, a school that is isolated from major industry, get a chance to work closely with a practicing engineer. The Lab gets a direct personnel recruiting link with NAU students and faculty. And Paul Price, the engineer-turned-professor, got a renewed appreciation for the current crop of engineering students — and what it's like to keep up with them.

Last summer, before Price put down his mechnanical pencil to pick up chalk and erasers, he dusted off college textbooks used 17 years ago and brushed up on the basics of his profession. He's been learning ever since.

"It's been a whale of an opportunity," Price says. "It's like getting a crash college education in one year — it forced me to become current in several areas."

Price's sojourn into the academic world was a first for NAU's School of Engineering. And NAU President J. Leonard Walkup thinks the program is worth repeating.

"We need a constant interchange between our engineering school and industry to keep us up to date," he says, "and the students must understand the relationship between courses in engineering and their application in industry."

To help students understand that relationship, Price teaches his classes as forums for gathering information on "real world" engineering.

The link between academic engineering and its application in industry is especially valuable to minority students, say NAU engineering Professor Leonard Haskie, a full-blooded Navajo, and Dave Duganne, a senior engineering student whose heritage is Seminole and Creek. NAU has one of the largest enrollments of native Americans in the country, with students representing 35 southwestern Indian tribes.

Haskie says several factors make Indian entry into engineering difficult. Federal subsidy of higher education for Indians is inadequate, he feels, but more important, the reservation and boarding schools available to Indians provide little exposure to college life and even less to the engineering profession.

The isolation of minorities from industry represents a substantial barrier, adds Duganne.

"Hearing talks by experts on specific engineering projects is very valuable," says Duganne, who took Price's class on contemporary developments in engineering. "It gives us an idea of what is actually going on in engineering and is much more up to date than our textbooks."

This semester Price added a class on "advanced design" to give senior engineering majors an opportunity to apply the design theory learned during their four years of college to projects ranging from flintlock rifles to solar collectors.

Keeping up with the students has provided Price with one of his biggest challenges — and rewards. "When a student asks questions, a lot of learning is involved for me, because if I don't know the answer, I have to find out," says Price, who admits his days as a professor are hectic.

"I really feel that I've become part of the whole university community," says Price, whose off-hours find him chatting with students and faculty, participating in faculty committee meetings and community events, and cheering the NAU Lumberjacks at athletic games. A favorite hobby — flying — has made him a popular speaker with NAU's Air Forcp ROTC cadets.

As for his soon-to-end job as an engineering professor, Price says: "The teaching experience has been more positive than I ever imagined. It's very satisfying — an ego trip really — to see people motivated by what I've told them. And it's a great feeling of accomplishment to see students do great things."

Trustees hammer out teacher pact stance

PLEASANTON — Trustees of the Pleasanton Joint School District met in closed session Monday night to put together a response to the Amador Valley Teachers Association's contract proposal for 1977-78.

At a public meeting last week at Harvest Park School, between 20 and 25 persons expressed viewpoints on various aspects of the AVTA proposal.

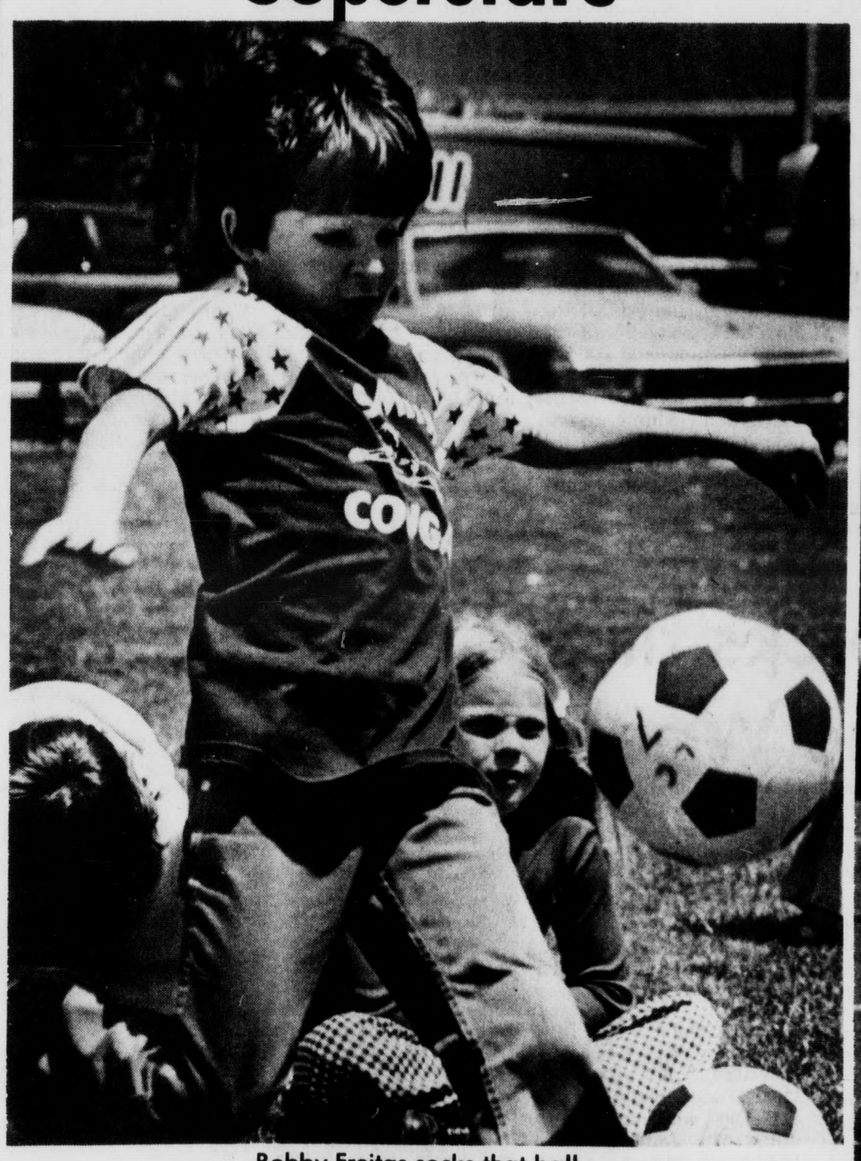

Pleasanton is the only district in the Valley not coming to mutual agreement on a contract for the past year. Under terms of collective bargaining, after the impasse proceedings are completed, a school board may set the rate of pay and other salient points.

AVTA has proposed a limited form of binding arbitration in which the board would deal with grievances at Level III.

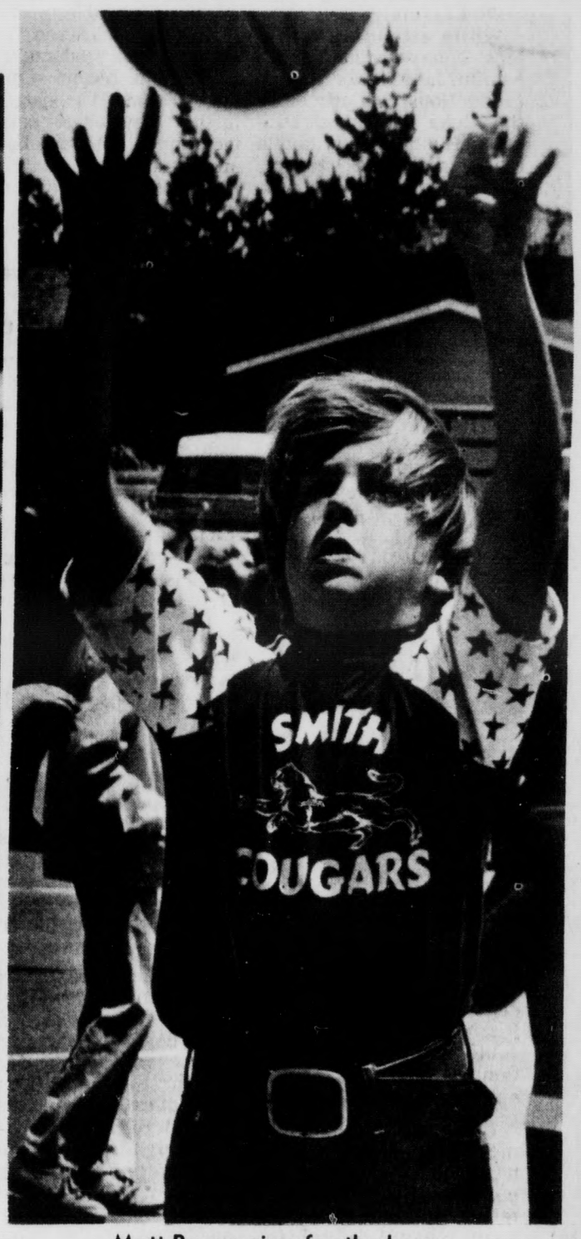

In their proposal's introductory statement, AVTA states "We feel certain that once the board has had an opportunity to deal with a grievance at Level III, it shall have enough confidence in the rightness of its decision, that it need not fear an impartial arbitrator reviewing the input of all parties and rendering a just decision, should the grievant decide to appeal to Level IV."

Under salary, the teacher unit has elected not to propose a "percentage" increase tied to the cost-of-living index — "when the district's funding outlook remains unknown. Instead, we have proposed a percentage tied only to the receipt of new money by the district. Therefore, we will accept less than a cost-of-living adjustment should the district receive insufficient funds."

Alternative program holds parent meeting

SAN RAMON — The open education alternatives program is having a second orientation meeting Wednesday for all interested parents of children in the elementary grades.

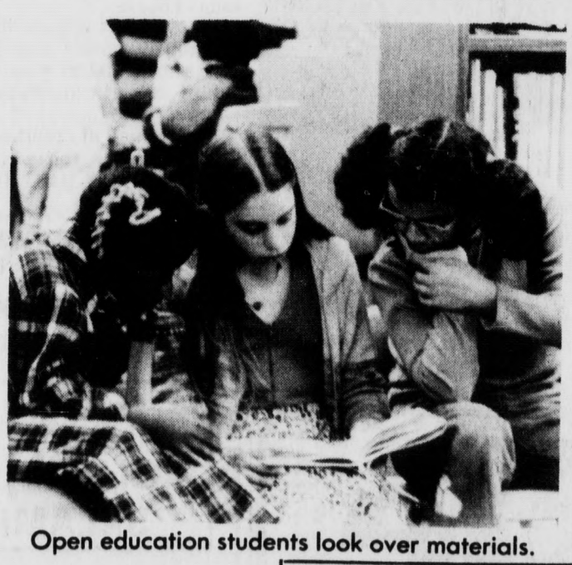

The meeting is scheduled at the Neil Armstrong School site on Calais Drive at 7:30 p.m.

Now in its second year, the San Ramon Valley Unified School District open education program stresses the learning process, not the product of learning. The program at Neil Armstrong School provides a workshop setting where students, parents, and other adults can capitalize on the interests and natural curiosity of students, making school relevant.

School officials say the program is aimed at making "human relationships important. Students are encouraged to share their knowledge and skills with each other. Time is spent helping students cope with their emotions."

The program is structured so that students are given a chance to develop self-discipline and a sense of responsibility for themselves and others.

Parents that would like further information may call Nancy Larson, 828-6132.

Wednesday at Amador auditorium

Miller's 'The Crucible' bows

Amador Creative Theatre will present "The Crucible" by Arthur Miller for three performances starting Wednesday at the Amador Valley High School auditorium.

Curtain each night is at 8 o'clock. Admission is $1.50 for adults and students without student body cards, and $1.25 for students holding cards. Tickets are available at the door and in advance by calling Laura Collins at 846-0111 or 846-2818.

"The Crucible" concerns the historic Salem Witch Trial Era and was written by Arthur Miller during the McCarthy era of the 1950s. This play is Miller's comment on both periods. Amador's interpretation of the play provides both an exciting and emotionally - moving vehicle for Miller's ideas.

Jerry Carlin, a former Amador Valley High dramatist, is directing the play.

Adele Denny, drama instructor at Amador for 14 years is serving as producer for this production. Laura Collins is student director.

The cast of "The Crucible" and the parts they play are as follows:

Mark Tandowsky as Hopkins; Sue Meyer as Betty Parris; Chris Heinbaugh as Rev. Parris; Andrea Anton as Tituba; Stephanie Smith as Abigail Williams; Heather Wilson as Susanna Walcott; Karen Luoma as Ann Putnam; David Richer as Thomas Putnam; Kim Longman as Mercy Lewis; Sally Davis as Mary Warren; Tom Madwell as John Proctor; Laurie O'Brien as Rebecca Nurse; Ross Tandowsky as Giles Corey; Chris Scott as Rev. Hale; Kim Henry as Elizabeth Proctor; David Norvell as Francis Nurse; Mitch E. Creegan as Ezeikiel Cheever; David Weatherford as John Willard; Bryan Waugh as Judge Hathorne; Greg Knepp as Judge Danforth; Sue Schneider as Sarah Good; Dan Carrick as a guard of the court and David Ben-Dev as a guard of the court.

Carlin, who is directing the production, is now a junior at San Francisco State and directing the show as a college project for credit.

Jerry activities have always centered around the theatre and he was very active in the drama program while at Amador. During his freshman year he portrayed Young Pat in "Auntie Mame" and his last play was "The Importance of Being Earnest", in which he played the title role of Earnest.

However, according to student director Laura Collins, these are only a few of the many shows he was involved with.

After leaving Amador, Jerry moved to Sacramento and studied theatre at a junior college there. While in Sacramento he appeared in "Bell, Book and Candle," portraying a young warlock, "Nicky." Jerry also performed in a Sherlock Holmes Trilogy and at the Old Eagle Theatre he played "Charley" in "Charley's Aunt."

Jerry's future plans include gaining his credentials and teaching in some midwestern hamlet where theatre is almost unheard of. Eventually he would like to work with educationally - handicapped kids using drama to develop imaginations, motor skills and to make them happy. Jerry is now attending San Francisco State and is majoring in Education with a theatre minor.

Gary Dickenson, another Amador alumni and currently enrolled at Cal State Hayward, designed the set and Kris Retiker from Cal Berkeley designed the Puritan costumes. Jeanette Abrell - Poole, a freshman at Chabot College, is designing the lighting for the play also.

Adele Denny, Amador's drama coach and Jerry's former teacher, agreed to let him direct the dramatic play and further agreed to be producer, because of Jerry's talent and her desire to see the drama program become more diversified.

"The Crucible" continues Thursday and Friday with 8 o'clock curtains both nights.

Foothill library

PLEASANTON— The Friends of the Library will conduct a flea market on Sunday, May 22 from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. at Foothill High School.

A donation of $5 to the group will get you a good booth space. There'll be a little bit of everything at the market, including a "white elephant" table with faculty - donated items.

Proceeds will go to boost the number of books and materials available to Foothill students.

In a story on the Foothill High library Sunday, the names of the parent volunteers in the photo were listed incorrectly. The parents shown in the photo are Jean Payne and Judy Markley. Also, the headlines over the Foothill library and an adjacent Harvest Park Authors Program stories were transposed.

"Library needs book - buying 'angels'" should have been over the Foothill library story, and the other, "Author tells 'secrets'" should have been over the Harvest Park story.

The Times regrets the incorrect photo identifications and the transposed headlines.

Adele Denny: The drama lady at Amador

An interest in drama is the only prerequisite for a sophomore year Amador Valley High student to embark on an exciting career of grease paint and first nights, of glitter, lights and immortality on film, either as an actor, director, writer, stagehand, stunt person, teacher....there is no end to the possibilities, or ... enjoy a lifetime of viewing and appreciating the best on stage or screen.

Guiding them through the steps to reach their individual goals is Adele Denny. Completing her 14th year at Amador as drama instructor and director, Mrs. Denny first became strongly interested in teaching drama in her third year at San Francisco State University.

While attending there, Mrs. Denny was active as a leading lady in her college productions, an officer in the Alpha Psi Omega Dramatic Honor Society, and a member of a USO troupe. Later she performed with Seattle Tryout Theater, San Francisco Community Theatre, and South San Francisco Players.

She also made television commercials for a toothpaste company and was the symbol girl in an advertising campaign for the San Francisco Examiner.

Acting and performing is a part of her family background as she is the niece of the well-known actor of the 1930s and 40s, Adolph Menjou.

Introduction to the theatre in the first semester (Drama I) offers a taste in the techniques of acting, stage speech and movement. Pantomines, impromptu skits, and short scenes are the vehicles for learning to control voice volume, clarity and rate of delivery, maintain eye contact with other performers and audience and develop poise and facial expressions and gestures to help communicate.

Given the basic information of the character, situation and locale of a scene, the student begins to learn stage presence and vocal and physical expression. Relationships to the other actors on stage is vital in the overall performance. The groups perform in the library and all teachers are invited to bring classes whenever possible.

Having whetted the young drama students' appetites, the second semester (Drama II) is spent in further developing acting techniques with emphasis on improvisational skills and styles of acting, and introduces the magic of stage makeup and costume.

The application of appropriate color base, highlight and shadow, rouge, pencil and eyeline for "basic" makeup and the application of nose putty, making a beard, drawing wrinkles, aging hands and "building" a scar ... all these help to begin to give students the feel of drama and theater.

The history of drama from Greek to modern times is reviewed. Students design charts of "costume silhouettes" of each period, collect appropriate material, develop individual sketches and search out costume rental agencies obtaining rates and availability. Scenes from various historical periods such as Greek, Shakespearean or 18th Century comedy are presented in class and to other classes, using these newly - acquired skills.

The third semester (Drama III) is designed to each students the beginning techniques of directing with emphasis on planning, technical skills and practical aplication of the director's art. The class also provides further performance experience and is designed to meet the needs of terminal and college prep students with strong interest in drama.

Choosing and planning a one act play, which includes selecting a cast from available class members and providing them with a script is the first task along with an evaluation of the difficulties experienced in choice of play such as period, costume, space allowance, rehearsal schedules, etc.

Students prepare a director's prompt book which includes an analysis of the play, the type, plot conflict, climax, tempo, and special emphasis. The prompt book includes makeup charts and costume charts for each character, set design and floor plan for te play, blocking charts indicating actor's movement on stage and any special action or business to be performed by the actors. The director is also concerned about the lighting, props and special sound effects. These one act plays are presented in the library during the lunch hour and to parents during open house nights.

Advanced acting and special project workshop (Drama IV) is taught concurrently with Drama III, to provide students with a variety of acting experiences. Students perform in a series of one-act plays under the direction of student directors supervised by Mrs. Denny.

Emphasis is on acting techniques and development of evaluation skills and the course is also designed to meet the needs of terminal and college prep students with a strong interest in drama. Individual projects are developed in various special interest areas by the students such as designing costumes or sets for a play, or creative makeup designs for a play. Part of the course requirement is to write a play or short skit which is produced and presented in the library to other classes.

Reader's Theatre (Drama V), designed to meet the needs of terminal or college prep students with strong interest in oral interpretation and/or drama, is a performance course which will develop techniques of reading literature to an audience. Emphasis is placed on vocal and facial expression, with interpretation of the author's material of prime importance. Students develop original scripts based on short stories, plays and non-fiction themes and may include such selections as Master's Spoon River Anthology, Benet's John Brown's Body, Anouilh's Antigone, Carlino's The Brick and the Rose, and others.

Students perform solo and multiple readings of dialogue type poetry, perform two-person scenes, prepare scripts from short story for Readers' Theatre presentations and direct and perform scripts of their choice. This type of presentation is frequently used as a demonstration of authors' works in English classrooms.

Every stage, movie television and radio production needs an "angel"! Drama students are involved in fund - raising activities to assist in the cost of stage settings, costumes, etc., and the Drama Club Dance, a turkey drawing and advertisement sales in production programs are some of the ways funds are obtained.

"All work and no play" also makes for a dull drama student, so classes have journeyed to San Francisco to see the American Conservatory Theatre performances of Othello and The Would Be Gentleman, The Birds at Chabot and Cabaret at Cal State Hayward, plus plays at Dublin and Foothill High Schools.

Not forgetting the community which supports its school programs and drama productions, the drama students are very active in services to the community.

They have served as judges, record - keepers and runners at speech contests; they have performed at various times on Pleasanton Junior Womens' fund - raising activities; organized a talent show to establish performing arts scholarships (three to be given this year); contributed funds to the boys' varsity basketball team and assisted at spirit rallies; purchase light - sound equipment for the auditorium and performed scenes at Foothill High School.

The 1976-77 season included performances of the musicals How to Succeed in Business and Cinderella, the comedy You Can't Take It With You, and the drama, The Crucible, which opens tonight for a three-performance run.

Tickets will be available for The Crucible at the door of the Amador Valley High auditorium tonight, Thursday and Friday.

The play is directed by Jerry Carlin, a Amador Valley High alum. Mrs. Denny is serving in the capacity of producer for this one production.

The Summer School session will be highlighted by performances of South Pacific.

Livermore gets fund rating

LIVERMORE — The Livermore Unified School District's Early Childhood Education (ECE) program has been ranked 53rd out of a total 350 school districts in California competing for expansion money.

According to Walt Capri, the district's elementary education director, Livermore's ECE program also ranks 170th out of the 826 California school districts participating in ECE.

Livermore's score of 54.73 was based on implementation, pupil progress and fiscal expenditures of six schools. This score qualified the district for expansion funds to serve 26.1 per cent, or 1,104 children in kindergarten through third grade.

Next fall, Jackson, Smith and Christensen Schools will be added to the roster of schools receiving the extra money ECE brings. Funds are spent to add more aides and teachers to the staff, increase library hours, train teachers in specialties, purchase supplies and provide enrichment experiences for the children in early grades.

Evaluations at each school are made by state "Monitor and Review" teams made up of educators. The scores of all ECE schools within a district are then aggregated to determine the percentage of expansion for the following year.

Granada seniors win $250 scholarship

LIVERMORE — Granada High School's senior class has won a $250 scholarship for collecting 260 pints of blood this year for the Alameda - Contra Costa Medical Association's blood bank.

Chairing this year's effort were students Renee Contratto, Carol Duncan, Renee Coronado and Mary Jamieson. Mrs. Geraldine Deck, Granada school nurse, helped to organize the two big collection efforts.

Thanks to the students and teachers, blood credits are now available for Livermore residents in need. Livermore High also sponsors a blood bank through their California Scholarship Federation honor club, but they fell short by a few dozen pints of winning one of the Blood Bank's awards.

Some 40 high schools in the East Bay collected blood this year for a total of 7,000 pints of blood serving area residents at various hospitals.

Awards for winning high schools were presented May 10 at the third annual Operation Relay awards banquet in Oakland.

Mendenhall picks first 'Student of the Week'

LIVERMORE — Lynn Cutting is a person who really enjoys the successes of others.

That's why the Mendenhall School eighth grader staged a singlehanded effort to announce the success of her friend, Kris Franklin, when Kris recently returned from a national swim meet with an outstanding record.

Lynn had the announcement printed in the school bulletin and made two huge posters to hang in the cafeteria. And that, along with Lynn's usual thoughtfulness, was why her fellow students named her as the school's first "Student of the Week."

The new "Student of the Week" program was instituted by vice principal Gerald Stunkel. "Students who are outstanding athletes or scholars receive special recognition many times in school," Stunkel writes in a letter announcing the program.

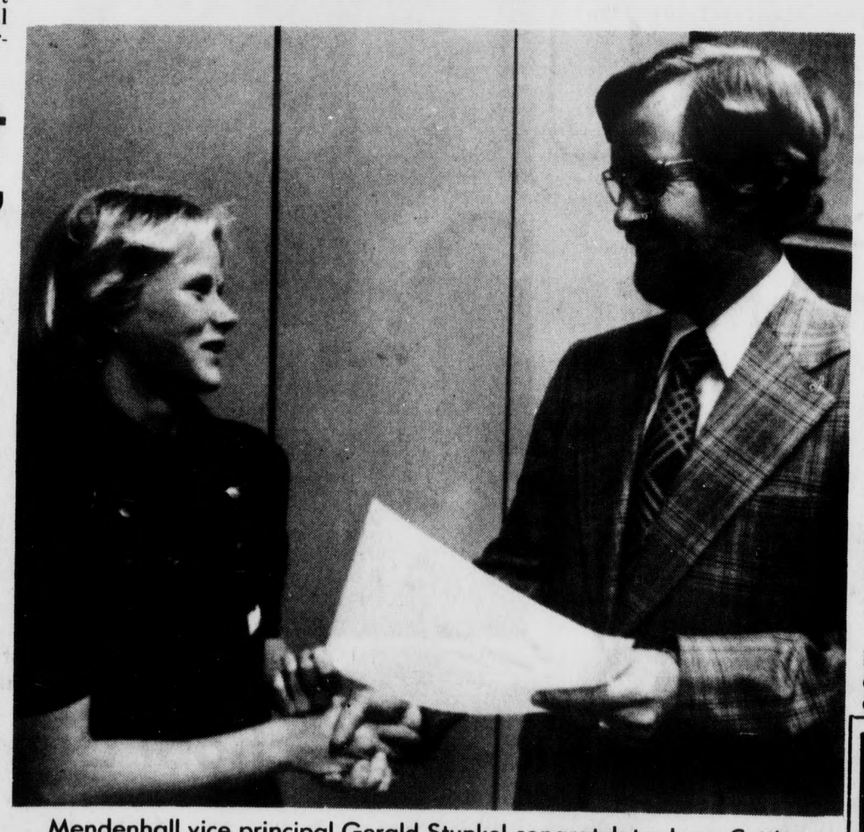

"But there are hundreds of very nice boys and girls who go about their daily lives doing friendly, considerate and helpful things for their fellow students without ever receiving any special recognition. In an attempt to express their appreciation to their classmates who make life at school especially enjoyable and pleasant, the students of William Mendenhall School have established a 'Student of the Week' award."

Nomination papers are submitted each week by any student who wants to put a classmate up for an award. Nomination papers are evaluated by a committee of students who make the final selection.

Winners receive a certificate of recognition and a choice of prizes such as all the ice cream they can eat, a pizza party or a record album.

The school's very first "Student of the Week" is described by her vice principal as a member of several school and community clubs who worked as a teacher's aide in sixth grade.

"Her warmth of personality, her hard work, her helpfulness and concern for others, her friendliness and her appearance have all served as very positive models for the sixth graders," Stunkel writes.

Child care classes on Saturdays

LIVERMORE — Anyone who has children or who babysits is invited to learn about "Child Care from a Child Development Perspective", a Chabot College mini - course.

Classes are two Saturday mornings, June 4 and 11, 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. in Room 203 at the Valley campus.

School sex code due tonight

LIVERMORE — The Livermore Unified School District's regulations against sex discrimination will be in effect soon if the school board approves them at a final reading tonight.

The five pages of regulations are available for perusal in the administration building (corner of Las Positas and Murrieta Boulevards) and in the city library. Trustees will look at the rules at their meeting at 7:30 tonight in the administration building.

Some highlights:

— Counselors are supposed to avoid sex role stereotyping in helping students plan careers.

— Male and female students are not supposed to have separate athletic programs except for football, basketball, wrestling, boxing, ice hockey, rugby "or other sports whose purpose or major activity involves bodily contact" and teams in sports "where selection is based upon competitive skills." — Unequal total expenditures for members of each sex or unequal expenditures for male or female teams are allowed.

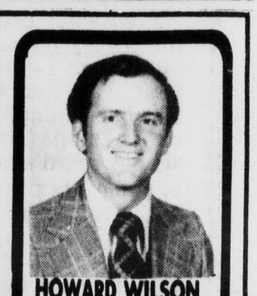

— The district is supposed to provide "separate but comparable" toilets, locker rooms and showers.

— Except for gym classes, no classes or activities are supposed to be limited to one sex or the other.

— The district is supposed to make sure both boys and girls have a chance to receive scholarships and awards in proportion to the number of each sex participating in athletics, "based solely on evaluation of performance and not gender."

— Boys and girls' athletics are supposed to have the same level of equipment and supplies provided, access to facilities and services, travel allowances and the same chance to receive coaching and academic tutoring.

Besides the Title IX sex discrimination regulations, the school board is scheduled to discuss their Early Childhood Education program, career education and other matters.

Network of women mobilizes for change

"The power of many begins with the power of one," was the rallying cry of over 300 Bay Area women who met recently to mobilize positive power towards enhancing and preserving life for the future.

At a symposium organized by Build the Earth, an all-woman educational organization, women from all walks of life spent an enthusiastic day at Mills College in Oakland organizing what they hope will be a nationwide movement within a year.

"What this age is screaming for is thousands of women working together for positive change," declared Speaker Mary Mae Colvin. Urging her listeners, who included over 30 valley women, to join her in a spiritual revolution, Colvin added, "A war focuses on one thing — winning. And in war, there is a wonderful bonding as men work to win."

Basing her beliefs on Author William James' statement that "man must discover the moral equivalent of war," Colvin stressed, "Our spiritual revolution must be the moral equivalent of war."

A recruitment goal of 100,000 women by June 1978 isn't too much to strive for, declared Colvin, stressing, "We have to think that big for the sake of the children and for life on the planet."

Colvin invited her listeners to join in forming Network, which will function as a Build the Earth project without regular meetings or officers.

Man has had the dominant role in shaping the direction of events in this planet, according to Colvin, but today's woman is now asked to accept the responsibility of participating actively with man in shaping the future.

"We are confidant that women can alter history," said the speaker.

The first step in bringing about a spiritual revolution, which will encompass fighting such threats to the "Tree of Life" as chemicals endangering the environment, overconsumption of our finite natural resources and violence on television, is "to move with the spirit of good will," stressed Colvin.

Knowledge is the second step, she said, which involves "people learning how to love." A violated word, love's meaning has been lost in "sticky terms," according to Colvin. "To love, we have to learn how to live."

Practical action is the third step women involved with Network must take, and on that note the assembly broke up to meet in small discussion groups.

Livermore resident Eileen Rinde directed a group of about 15 valley women, who concentrated on defining Network's objectives and what action to take first.

Interest in Network was spurred by a wide variety of reasons, from one Pleasanton housewife who was against pornography to a San Ramon conservation activist.

The end of the symposium found the majority of women deeply committed to the group's first practical step getting thousands of signatures supporting conservation measures, which will be turned over to Gov. Jerry Brown at Network's June meeting.

Women interested in learning more about Network may call Eileen Rinde at 443-3875, Lonnie Murphy at 447-7299 or Betty Van Horn at 443-4249.

Holmes

The California Association for the American Conservatory Theatre will present a benefit performance of William Paterson in "A Profile of Holmes" Tuesday, May 17 at 7:30 p.m. at the Lawrence Livermore Laboratory Auditorium, East Avenue and Greenville Road in Livermore.

The presentation, compiled by Paterson, is based on speeches, letters, opinions and andotes of Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, highlighting the famous jurist's career from his early Civil War days to his falling out with Roosevelt.

Ecology series

A series of summer workshops, sponsored by the Valley Ecology Center and Livermore Area Recreation and Park District, will give practical guidance concerning conservation of land, air, food, water and energy.

The workshops will begin on Wednesday, June 29, on a weekly basis, ending August 17, and may be attended at a cost of $1.50 per class. (Half price for those under 18.) See LARPD summer brochure for details.

Anthropos hosts a super fun way to super health

Balloons, pumpkin cookies and good fellowship mad Anthropos' Sunday health faire an event that is bound to become an annual valley favorite.

Held at The Barn in Livermore, the all day faire featured 20 "roads to super health," with workshops on everything from vision improvement exercises to dealing with anger and nutrition.

Each workshop was led by an expert who had volunteered his time, with the $600 proceeds from the event going towards the Anthropos Foundation. Located at 1814 Cataina Ct. in Livermore, Anthropos has existed for two years as a "healthing center" that provids weekly programs on wide-ranging topics.

Founded by Lynn Bieber, Anthropos has served as a meeting place for individuals concerned about the environment, personal growth and physical and mental health.

Professional counselor Jill Raiguel, coordinator for the faire, kicked it off by explaining that each individual serves as the vehicle following the road map to health.

Tight shoulders and allergies may all be signals that you need a vacation or that you have trouble expressing anger, Jill says. "If you tune in to what your body is telling you before a condition becomes chronic, you'll have a healthy journey."

For more information on Anthropos call 443-1818.

Should he get a banana brownie or a raisin - filled pumpkin cookie? Lynn Bieber helps a youngster make the difficult decision. The faire also sold a wide variety of other health foods, along with a cookbook featuring its recipes.

TO THOSE WHO WOULD CONSERVATIONISTS BE

To avoid containers made of plastic, which cannot be recycled, buy your milk in paper cartons. But if you've been using plastic and have saved 500 of them, then place a funnel in each one, and put them in rows on your roof. Catch rain water in them, and full, (I hope your roof doesn't cave in from the weight) they'll serve as insulation from heat and cold, and may also be converted to a solar heating unit. Work on it.

However, to conserve trees, do not buy your milk in paper cartons either. Get glass bottles, returnable, or recyclable, or get personally acquainted with a cow.

To conserve gasoline, and to prevent air pollution by hydrocarbons, do not drive a car out into the countryside to buy the milk from the farmer. Walk, or ride bicycles with your family instead. It will double as a recreational outing.

If you use bicycles, you are using metals, especially if you crash alot, and consuming rubber in the tires, and if you walk, you are using shoe leather. Better go barefoot.

To conserve heating fuel, shut down all your heaters, and wear long underwear. Watch television in the evening in sleeping bags. And keep the television off. Besides saving electricity, it will save your eyesight, some tempers, and keep the kids from watching all that violence. It will also keep you from watching all that violence.

If in the past you happened to have saved 75 of those clear plastic molds that hold 6 packs of drink cans together, there is a way of weaving them together to make a splendid hammock, using clothesline cord. You figure it out.

Bird - watching is a good sport for those who do not wish to pollute the environment, or waste natural resources. If it seems boring to you to sit by the hour watching birds, your attitude is probably wrong. I know mine is.

Grow your own vegetables in your backyard, also the front yard. This too is recreational activity for the whole family. Remember this when your back aches. Good exercise. Remember that.

Use recycled water, of course. And fertilize your roses with banana peels. They break down fast, and supply potassium, when buried around the roots.

If your garden has snails, don't sprinkle snail poison. Be very continental and have Escargot for breakfast. Tasty with butter sauce, served in the shell. (It wasn't my idea. I read it in a magazine.)

While gardening out in the sun, to protect your baby-soft skin, put a white cloth sack over your head with a drawstring around the neck, and a peekhole in the front, or else do all your gardening by the full of the moon. Consult the Old Farmers' Almanac for best planting times.

Seaweed fertilizer works wonders for growth, protects from diseases and insects. It's good for your plants, too.

And fresh seaweed (kelp) may be substituted for cucumbers and green tomatoes in pickle recipes, while providing good nutrition. Remember, you read it here first.

Ride 'em cowboy!

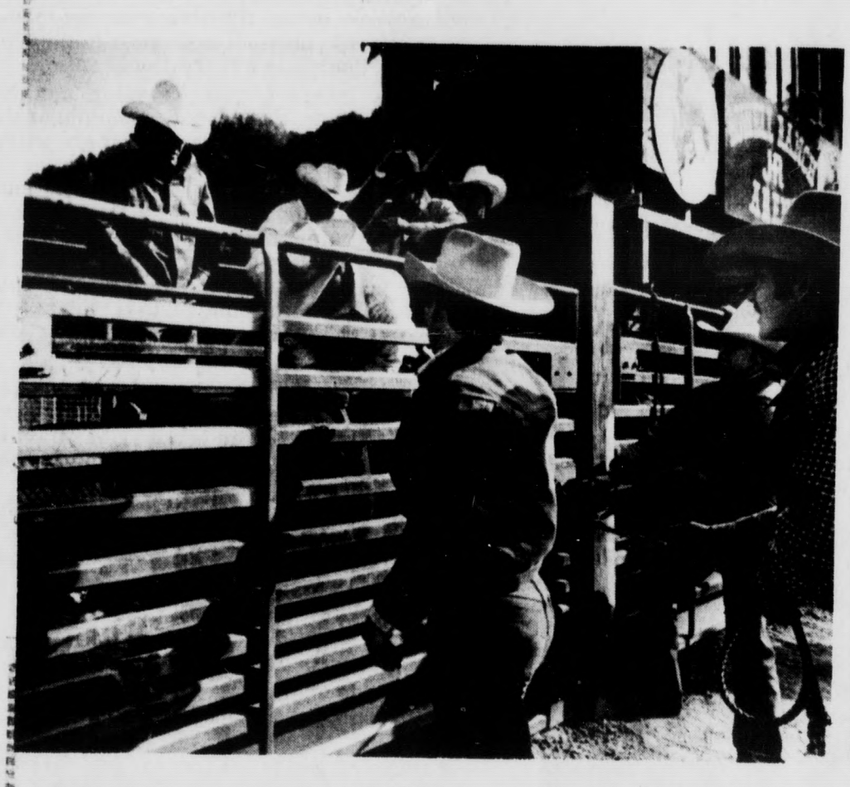

Staying on a big Brahma Bull the full eight seconds is not exactly easy, as Livermore resident Ken Mendoza discovered this weekend at the Hayward Rodeo.

The tense moments, waiting his turn, found Ken checking the ropes he would hold to stay on. Once in the right position, hand clenched on rope, and waiting for the bull to stand squarely, the cowboy nodded and the gate swung open.

Ken will be trying again when the Livermore Rodeo action begins at Livermore Stadium June 11 and 12.

Big response for lifesaving class

A pilot program in Seattle, Wash., resulted in a dramatic decrease in heart attack deaths because enough trained people were around that victims were often revived and rushed to the hospital instead of being left for dead.

Currently, California is embarked on an emergency medical systems project. But the start has been fitful, since few qualified instructors are around to train others. Some classes are available through the Red Cross office in Livermore.

Valley Memorial Hospital staff are being trained in CPR by in - service education director Mina Stewart. One class was also offered to the VMH Auxiliary members.

Ulricksen has taught some classes for community groups but only a handful of people in the Valley are qualified and willing to teach the six - hour course leading to certification in CPR.

The first three hours, yesterday morning, covered mouth - to - mouth breathing techniques which are vaguely familiar to many. The second segment, tomorrow, will take in the tricky art of pressing on the heart to stimulate its interrupted pumping action.

Besides describing the step - by - step breathing maneuver, which brings back a person's color and circulates oxygen throughout the body like a breathing machine, Ulricksen had some interesting pointers for his audience.

The "danger zone" for a person deprived of oxygen is four to six minutes, he said. Massive brain damage begins to occur, because of lack of oxygen, after the six - minute mark.

However, a person who has been without air 15 minutes or more may sometimes be revived. Especially good candidates are drowning victims because the refrigerating effect of cold water decreases the body's need for oxygen. Poor candidates are asphyxiation victims because other gases such as carbon monoxide have replaced all the oxygen in the body.

Once you've started CPR, Ulricksen said, don't give up until you're completely exhausted. "M 're your best effort," he urged.

He said a Good Samaritan law in California protects people who are trying to save a life from prosecution later on, even though they may have injured the person they were trying to save. Since CPR involves risk to the rib cage, the law is of special importance to people practicing this technique.

Homeowners fume over sidewalks

Lesher News Bureau

MARTINEZ — Ninety-one Danville driveways that don't go anywhere are making homeowners pretty unhappy over their dippy sidewalks.

Members of the county Public Works Department aren't overjoyed over the unused driveways and neither is Crocker Homes which would like the county to release its $483,000 bond it put up for the project.

Thomas Van Voorhis, attorney for Crocker Homes, told the supervisors' finance committee Monday that the county was after the wrong party to fix the sidewalks. And besides it would cost $40,000.

Van Voorhis pointed out that Crocker Homes did put in the street, sidewalks and driveways but then sold the property to Woodhill Development.

Woodhill Development decided that the plot of land would work better if entry was made at the rear of the homes through the use of an alley.

As luck would have it, when Woodhill Development came back to the county to get permission for the alley and the first 24 homes it met with a substitute engineer.

The engineer, not wanting to miss anything, checked all the right boxes including the one that said unused driveways had to be removed.

But when it came time for premits for the rest of the homes, the regular engineer was on the job. Woodhill Development provided him with a plan showing where the alley would go and how the rear entry was to be made. It also showed sidewalks and existing curbs in front of the houses, but didn't show the unused driveways. The plan was approved.

Crocker Homes said the county goofed. It was the county who should have known about the unused driveways even though they weren't shown on the plan and made Woodhill promise to fix them up, according to Voorhis.

Vern Cline, public works director, pointed out that the driveways were put in by Crocker Homes in the first place without a permit. He also said most of the time the county allows this because the driveways ususally get used.

Homeowners at the committee meeting said they didn't want the county to release that $438,000 bond until the sidewalks were fixed. So far none, not even the first 24 are fixed.

County Counsel John Clausen, who sat in on the meeting, didn't say anything until he was asked how fast he could come up with an opinion.

"Oral or written?" he asked.

"I'd like to have this in writing," said Shroder.

Clausen said that would take a littel longer, but promised to have an answer in a week.

Furniture in town

DUBLIN — A long awaited major furniture outlet will open here late this year if plans are approved by the Alameda County Planning Department.

R B Furniture has submitted drawings for a 19,140 - square - foot building on Dublin Boulevard just west of Regional Court near the Howard Johnson's Motor Lodge.

The county planning department will conduct a preliminary site review this month. If the plans are not opposed, construction should begin this summer.

Alarming court backlog in Contra Costa County

Lesher News Bureau

MARTINEZ — Criminal trials are up 100 per cent over last year and civil cases awaiting trial over a year have doubled.

Presiding Superior Court Judge Coleman Fannin told the supervisors' finance committee that "It is sinful not to provide the community for its needs."

He said the Judicial Council of California after analyzing the county's case filings has stated there is a need for two more judicial positions to carry the projected caseload through 1978.

Fannin said the only thing wrong with the Judicial Council's projections is that they are understated, that so far this year the county's actual caseload is higher in all areas than the projections.

There are currently 12 judges, two referees and one domestic relations commissioner in the county's Superior Court system.

The referees who deal solely with juveniles work from 8 a.m. to 6 or 7 at night, said Fannin.

"The workload is horrendous," he said.

Civil cases awaiting trial for over a year have increased from 360 in January to 660 in March, 1977.

Superior Court Judge Martin Rothenberg, also at the finance meeting, told supervisors tht "our judges turn out more cases per judge than any other in the ten metropolitan counties we were compared with."

We have the highest rate of depositions of any court in California," he said.

The judges are asking that the new judicial positions be filled by one referee-commissioner and one judge.

Judges pointed out that the referee-commissioner is a local appointment.

"We don't need the governor to appoint a commissioner," Fannin said.

The referee-commissioner would work in both juvenile cases and domestic relations.

Fannin said this would free judges for jury trials.

"The real crying need is in jury trials," he said.

The Superior Court system now costs the county from a million to $1.5 million a year to operate.

A 1977 Ford Granada* was brought to Germany for a scientific ride comparison with a Mercedes-Benz 450 SE†. Testing was conducted by an independent German engineering firm.

Test 1: Smoothness test. The engineers drove the Granada and the Mercedes at various speeds over roads in Northern Germany, ranging from cobblestone to smooth highway. Using a sensitive electronic recorder, they measured vibration levels. Results: In three out of the four tests, there were "no major differences" between the two cars.

Test 2: Quietness test. Again, the two cars were compared over a variety of German road surfaces at speeds from 30 to 55 mph. A sound meter recorded interior decibel levels on the dBA scale. Results: In all tests the Ford Granada rode as quietly as the Mercedes-Benz.

Homeowners step up burglary fight

EDITOR'S NOTE: Suburban residents who used to leave their homes unlocked are installing elaborate burglar alarm systems. City dwellers bar their windows and bolt their doors. Here, in the first of a three-part series, is a look at the problem of burglary.

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

In little more than the time it takes you to read this sentence, a burglar will have broken into someone's home or business.

It may have been yours.

The Federal Bureau of Statistics defines burglary as "the unlawful entry of a structure to commit a felony or theft. The use of force to gain entry is not required."

According to the bureau, "prevention and detection of the burglary offense poses a most difficult problem to law enforcement. Volume alone is an overriding factor..."

The FBI says there were some 3.25 million burglaries in 1975, the latest year for which figures are available. That works out to one burglary every 10 seconds and represents an increase of about 7 per cent from 1974.

Residential burglaries accounted for almost two-thirds of the total in 1975. Over half of them occurred during the day. Losses from these burglaries amounted to $925 million, up 21 per cent from 1974, compared to an increase of only 5 per cent in losses from nonresidential burglaries.

The average dollar loss per residential burglary was over $440.

Could you afford that kind of loss? If not, what have you done to stop it? How well is your house protected? How easy would it be for someone to break in?

A growing number of Americans are asking themselves those questions. And their answers add up to a boom for manufacturers and sellers of equipment to protect homes, not only against crime, but also against such natural disasters as fire.

A spokesman for the National Burglar and Fire Alarm Association said there are no over-all statistics on sales of alarm systems. But she said that the market for consumer alarms — to detect burglary and fire in homes and automobiles — is the fastest growing segment of the business.

The rate of growth in consumer alarms has been 15 to 20 per cent annually for the past several years, she said, and the boom is expected to continue since the market remains far from saturated.

The association spokesman estimated that only 1 per cent of all residences in America are equipped with burglar alarms. Another 1 per cent have some sort of fire alarm system, she said.

Part of the reason for the increase in security systems has been the rise in burglary. Another important factor, however, is that costs have started to decline. "Previously, only the very, very rich could afford an elaborate security system," she said. "But technology has improved tremendously in the past five years, bringing down costs."

Burglar alarm systems now cost from $300 to $1,500, depending on the type of residence and the kind of protection you want. Some systems also involve payment of a monthly fee for security forces.

A recent study by Security World Publishing Co. of manufacturers of security and fire systems showed that sales of all types of protection services, residential and commercial, totalled just over $2 billion last year, up from a little more than $1.5 billion the year before. This year's sales are expected to reach almost $3 billion, the Security World survey showed.

When it comes to fire alarm systems, the biggest growth has been in smoke detectors, available for as little as $30 to $50. Many communities now require installation of detectors in new buildings.

The National Fire Prevention and Control Administration of the Commerce Department says that manufacturers estimated 1976 sales of smoke detectors at $87 million and the agency predicts that sales will reach the $200 million mark by 1980.

Before you consider any sort of security system, you should look at your home to check existing construction for possible areas of improvement.

The National Bureau of Standards says that one of the most common ways a burglar enters a house is by breaking the strike out of the door frame. The strike is the metal plate attached to the side of the door frame where the bolt latches to the door.

If the screws used to attach the strike to the frame are too short, the plate is easy to detach. The Bureau of Standards suggests screws that are long enough to go all the way through the frame and into the wall studs, combined with a longer-than-normal strike. An eight-inch strike plate with three-inch screws — available most places for well under $10 — should be sufficient.

Glass around doors also is a potential danger spot, since burglars can break through, reach in and open the door from the inside. If your home has panes of glass that are large enough to reach through and are located within 40 inches of the door knob or lock, cover the area with protective grillwork or replace the glass with a burglar-resistant material. Among materials to look for are tempered glass, laminated glass, acryllic plastic and polycarbonate plastic.

Jalousie doors, with glass slats that angle out, are another problem, since it is often possible to manipulate the knob or crank that operates the doors from outside. Remove the knob or lever when it is not in use or drill a small hole through the housing and shaft of the knob and insert a pin through the hole to prevent the crank from being turned.

The Bureau of Standards says it is impossible to define the "most secure" door because of the variety of materials and workmanship involved. Generally, however, a wood door of solid core construction, 1¾ inches thick, should offer adequate protection. Metal doors of the type often used in apartment houses are even better.

A door opening outward generally is less vulnerable to a burglar than one opening inward, since it is more difficult to pull a door out of its frame than it is to push it in. The outward door also may leave the hinge pins accessible, however. Make sure the pins are not removable or that the hinges interlock when the door is closed.

One way to cut losses in the event a burglary does occur is with federal crime insurance. The program was developed by the Federal Insurance Administration of the Department of Housing and Urban Development and a little more than one-third of the 50 states are participating.

Costs vary according to crime rates in the area involved. Policies generally insure against losses of up to $10,000 resulting from burglary or robbery and policies cannot be canceled because of loss.

To find out if you are eligible, contact any licensed property insurance agent or broker. Details also are available from Federal Crime Insurance, P.O. Box 41033, Washington, D.C., 20014.

Mail: higher cost, less service

By JEFFREY MILLS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — You probably will pay higher postage charges and receive mail only five days per week by early next year, the Postal Service said Monday.

Postmaster General Benjamin F. Bailar said the price of a stamp for first-class letters will rise from the current 13 cents to at least 15 cents. It will be 16 cents if six-day delivery is maintained, he warned.

Bailar told a Senate panel that the Postal Service board of governors probably will act within two months on the proposals.

Both steps have been under consideration for months, but Bailar's pronouncement was more definite than previous statements and shed new light on the timing of the proposed changes.

Several procedures still must be carried out before the moves could be put into effect, Bailar said.

After approval by the governors, both proposals would have to be considered by the Postal Rate Commission, an independent agency that makes recommendations on mail rates and services.

With time allowed for commission deliberation, the higher rates would not take effect until "the second quarter of calendar 1978" and the reduced deliveries would not be in effect until after the next Christmas mailing season, Bailar said.

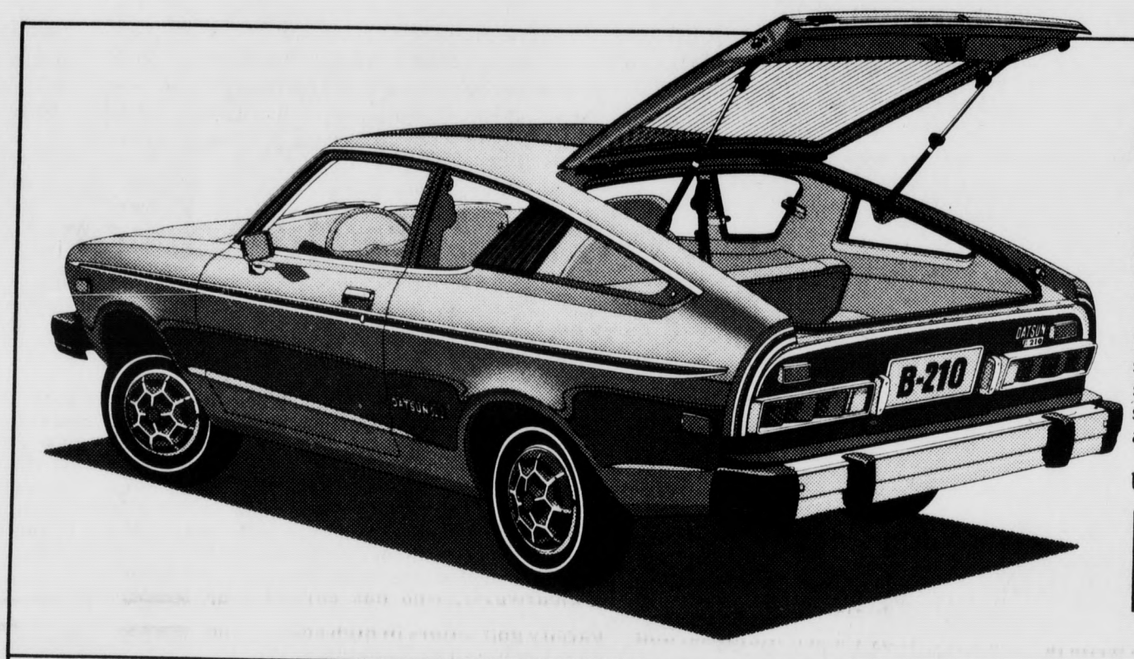

He said the Postal Service will not wait for Congress to express its collective opinion on the moves before putting them into effect.

But there "would be generous time for Congress to take whatever action it wanted," said Bailar after recounting the timetable for the reduction of deliveries. "After that, we would act."

Several key House members have complained that the Postal Service is considering eliminating one delivery day — probably Saturday — on the basis of recommendations made last month by a federal study commission without giving Congress time to consider the whole package.

Bailar also said that the mail agency soon would resume slowly closing rural post offices in areas where it feels it could do so without hurting service.

Ali goes easy: wins decision

LANDOVER, Md. — Muhammad Ali posed and postured but punched enough to retain the world heavyweight championship Monday night with a unanimous decision over Alfredo Evangelista, a 22 - year old Spaniard who never quit trying.

Ali had it when he needed it but there were several times during the 15 rounds that the self - proclaimed greatest appeared to be more shadow than substance.

It was the 35 - year - old champion's experience and still excellent left hand that carried the day in his first fight since his disputed decision victory over Ken Norton last Sept. 28.

Judges Terry Moore and Ray Klingmeyer each scored it 72-64 for Ali. Referee Harry Cecchini, handling his first title fight after 35 years in the business, scored it 71-65 for the champ.

The Associated Press had it 69-66 for Ali.

Ali spent much of the first half of the fight clowning. But there were no smiles, no asides to the crowd, no gestures over the last seven rounds as Evangelista, who had never previously gone more than eight rounds, kept trying.

They questioned the No. 10 ranking of the 22 - year - old Uruguayan - born Evangelista and his experience. They can not question his heart nor his pride.

Times SPORTS

Dave Weber, Editor

A crowd of about 12,000 and a national television audience watched Ali coast through the first six rounds while Evangelista tried to pressure him against the ropes.

In the seventh round, Ali spent most of the three minutes on the ropes while Evangelista tried to work through the champ's shell. Three times Ali stuck out his jaw, pointed a gloved hand at it and dared the challenger to hit him as the champion's corner shouted for him to quit taking risks.

In the eighth and ninth rounds, Ali became more serious. In the final minute of the eighth he scored with a series of blows to the head and shook off a good Evangelista left hook. In the ninth he shook Evangelista with a left - right to the head in the first 45 seconds and scored a good hook just before the bell.

But Evangelista would not quit.

With Ali becoming noticeably tired and at times seemingly having trouble keeping his interest up, Evangelista appeared to have the best of the 11th and 12th rounds, landing some body shots and a couple of head punches while Ali leaned against the ropes once more.

But as he has done so often in the past, Ali came alive as though he sensed the momentum changing.

In the 13th round, he landed a left - right to the head and followed with two hooks that stunned Evangelista and also scored several good jabs.

The fight was his, although Evangelista kept swarming until the final bell as he made his second loss the proudest moment of his 16 - fight career.

The Spaniard, who weighed 209½, earned $85,000 and a great deal more respect.

Ali, 221¼ for his 21st championship fight, banked $2.7 million but left some questions as to how much longer the road is until it reaches the end of his illustrious and controversial career.

Murray Olderman

Kareem rules the roost

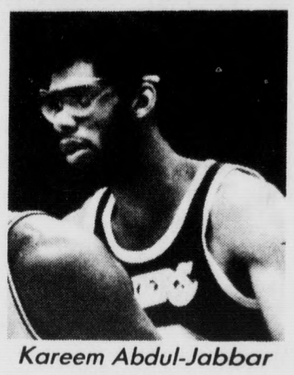

Just ask

The tipoff:

We have to say it definitely — Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, the former Lew Alcindor, is the greatest player in the history of basketball. No one's quite sure how tall he is. The book lists him at 7-2, but he's probably closer to 7-4. Whatever, besides his intimidating presence, he is the one big man who has the effortless moves of a six-footer.

Q. Has Bill Melton, the veteran third baseman with the Cleveland Indians, ever had a back operation? — T.M., Zanesville, O.

Not in the surgical sense. A few years ago, Melton, who had been having disc trouble, went through a new treatment process in which the extract of the papyrus plant is injected into the disc area and atrophies the herniated pulp matter between the vertebrae. It put him back on his feet and enabled the 31-year-old slugger to continue his career without a hitch.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar

Q. What city were the Los Angeles Rams in before they became the LA Rams? Who was middle linebacker for the Steelers before Jack Lambert? — Francis Carolan, Philadelphia, Pa.

The Rams were originally based in Cleveland, granted a franchise by the NFL in 1937. By 1945, paced by a young quarterback named Bob Waterfield, they won the NFL title, then moved to Los Angeles the next year — the first major league team on the West Coast. Before Jack Lambert broke in as a rookie starter for the Steelers in 1974, the middle linebacker was Henry Davis, a Grambling product who had started with the New York Giants. A neck and back injury suffered by Davis in '74 training camp opened a wedge for Lambert.

Q. At our Sportsman Club meeting the other night two questions came up which still are unanswered. Help, please! 1. Ron Reid, pitcher for the Phillies — what pro basketball team did he play for? 2. Chuck Connors, movie star, formerly member of Dodger franchise. What pro basketball team did he play for? — S. Palmer, Allentown, Pa.

Reid played with the Detroit Pistons in 1965 and 1967 — a time when he also belonged to the Atlanta Braves. He was the last to play two sports on a major league level, unless you want to count John Lucas of the Houston Rockets, who belongs to the Golden Gaters of World Team Tennis. Chuck Connors played pro basketball briefly with the Boston Celtics — his chief claim to fame was that he shattered a glass backboard in pre - game practice after hanging on the rim.

Q. Would you please tell me where I could write to Dick Butkus, the Chicago Bear great? I've been a fan of his for years. T.J.S., Marinette, Wis.

Butkus can be reached at Route 2, P.O. Box 650, DeLand, Fla. 32720. He does some TV commercials, a little acting, some announcing for CBS and was on New Orleans Saints radio last fall. His legal hassles with the Bears, his football employer, were settled a year ago. In fact, Dick applied for a job as Bears' color man on radio. He won't get it.

Q. In the National Hockey League when a goal is scored or when there are any penalties, why is the official time always recorded from the start of a period? Why don't they go by the time on the scoreboard? Wouldn't this be easier? — Steve Bodnar, Jr., Coatsville, Pa.

It's just a sports tradition to record time elapsed on scores. They do the same in football. A man scored a touchdown at 12:11 of the third period, for instance, not at 2:49 on the clock. All it requires is some simple subtraction.

Q. How did Billy Parks happen to be a free agent so that the Chicago Bears could sign him as a wide receiver? And why the Bears? — J.L., Anaheim, Calif.

Parks, a gifted pass catcher out of Long Beach State, has been a tempermental type ever since he signed with the San Diego Chargers in 1971. He was released by the Houston Oilers last year — one of Parks' problems is that he's never sure he wants to play pro football. And when he does, it's invariably for Sid Gillman, his first coach. He went with Sid to Dallas; he went with Sid to Houston. And now that Sid was signed on to run the Bears' offense this year, presto, here comes Billy Parks again.

Parting shot:

The biggest idiots in the world have to be pro basketball fans — at least those I see sitting close to the court in places like the Oakland Coliseum Arena. The garbage that comes out of their mouths is unbelievable.

Got a tough question about sports and the people who play them? All you have to do is ask Murray Olderman. Write him in care of The Times, P.O. Box 607, Pleasanton, California, 94566. The most interesting questions will be answered in this column. Olderman regrets he cannot write personal responses to all the questions.

Mustangs fourth in NCS golf finals

Alameda High School, led by medalist Kris Moe's 146 total over 36 holes, walked off with top team honors in the 1977 North Coast Section Golf tournament held at Peacock Gap course in San Rafael Monday.

The five - man Hornet squad was 10 strokes under its nearest challenger, San Rafael, the second place team at 782. Cardinal Newman of Santa Rosa was third with 803.

Monte Vista High of Alamo, the East Bay Athletic League champion, finished fourth at 811, five strokes under Antioch High, the Diablo Valley Athletic League kingpin scoring 816. Moreau of Hayward, a Catholic Athletic League representative, rounded out the top five at 823.

Others in the top 10 in team scoring were Tennyson of Hayward, 831; Del Valle of the Foothill Athletic League, 833; Sonoma, 867, and Berkeley, 872.

Tied for second behind Moe in individual competition were Dave Hinton, Drake, and Mike Rooney, Rancho Cotati, both at 149. Next with 150s were Andy Paisel, Alameda, and Brad Corbett, San Rafael.

Keith Clearwater, last year's DVAL champion from Northgate High and this year's runnerup, and Bob Blair of Montgomery, Santa Rosa, tied at 151, followed by two local divotmen who shot 154s, Greg Allio of San Ramon and Jim Saccomano, Pleasant Hill.

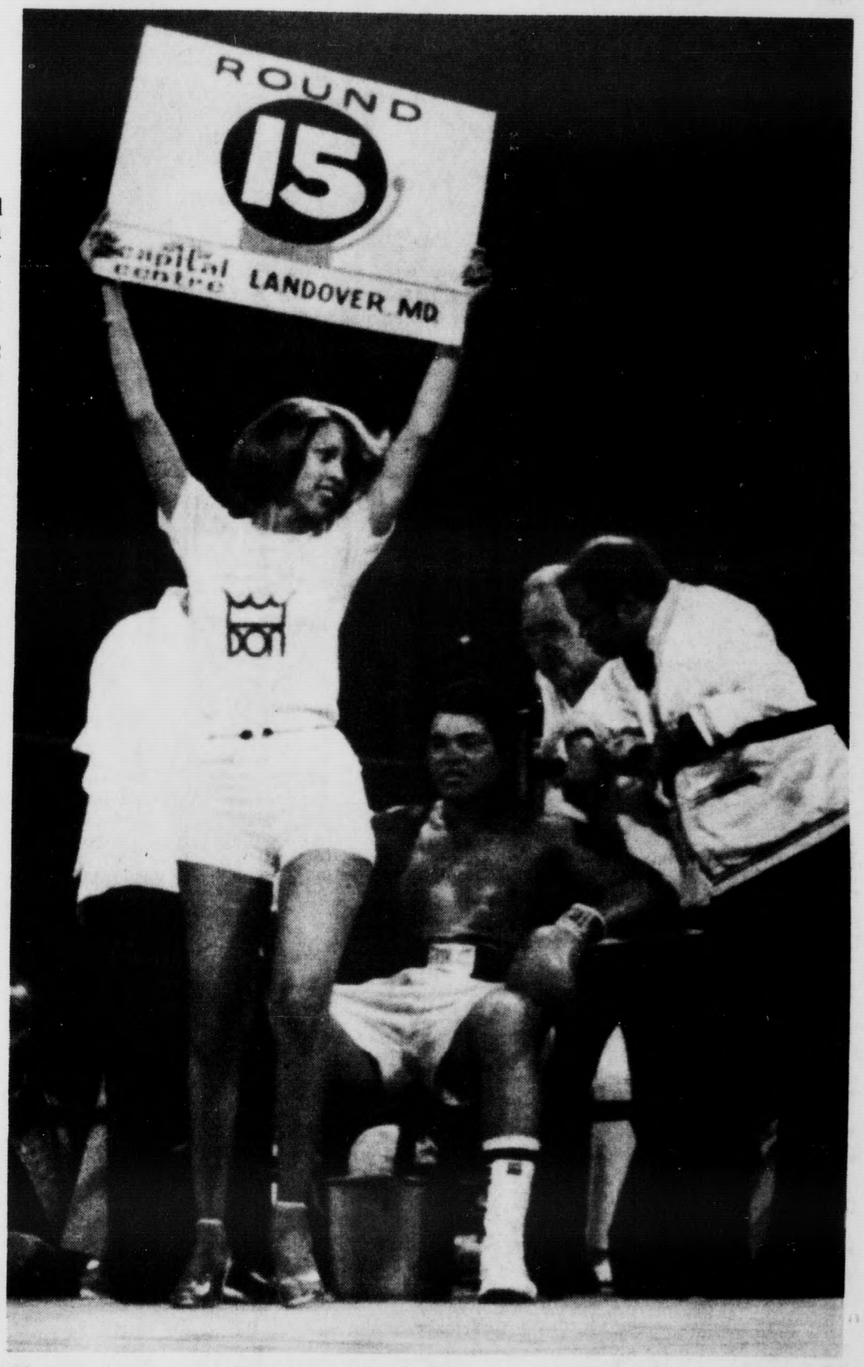

Alameda and San Rafael, the 1-2 teams at the NCS, qualified for the Northern California CIF golf tournament, along with the top four individuals (Not including the first two teams), to be held on Monday, June 6, at Pine Mountain Lake Course in Groveland, near Sonora.

Clearwater, Blair, Rooney and Hinton made the top individual four.

Best morning round in the NCS was posted by Del Valle's Bert Buehler, who shot a 70 for the only sub-par of the day, but skied to 89 fighting a brisk wind in the afternoon. Saccamono's 73, two over par, was the best score of the final 18 holes of competition.

Champ Muhammad Ali watches as a card call announces the 15th round.

Cary's power leads Cal over Dublin

In a game highlighted by the power slugging of Chuck Cary and the liberal use of pitchers by both teams, California High School took a 11-5 decision eight - inning decision over Dublin in an East Bay Athletic League baseball game on the losers' field yesterday.

Cary smacked a home run in the first inning, to drive in three runs and added a triple in the sixth stanza to spark a 13-hit California attack.

The Grizzlies, now 6-7 in EBAL play, can help decide the EBAL champion when they meet leader San Ramon on the Wolves' diamond today. If San Ramon wins they will have a 12-2 record and advance to the North Coast Section finals. If the Grizzlies win SR and Monte Vista will tie for the league championship.

California broke through for six runs in the top of the eighth yesterday to nail the Gaels' coffin.

The Grizzlies struck quickly in the eighth stanza.

Singles by Doug SMith, Steve Lamp and Mike Tye brought in one run.

Tyler Laurie then belted a single which scored Lamp and an rror on the throw back to the infield scored Tye with the third run.

A single by third baseman Bob Nelson, a walk to winning pitcher Bret Cary and two more walks scored another pair of runs. The final run came across on a single by Mattson.

Dublin had tied the score at 5-all in the bottom of the seventh.

After Mike Hardy flied out to left field Bob Richardson smashed a double to center field. John Downing then grounded out but Gary Rader's single scored Richardson with the tieing run.

After California's early 3-0 lead in the first inning the Grizzlies scored their fourth marker in the second stanza.

Roger Hurlow opened the inning with a bunt single and Mike Daugherty walked. A perfect sacrifice by Tye and walks to Laurie and Nelson brought in the forth tally.

Dublin came back to score its first run in the third inning.

After catcher Mike Hack grounded out Paul gordon belted the second of his four hits of the day. Sean Mays walked, advancing Gordon and Hardy fanned for the second out.

However, Richardson then lined a single to score Gordon with the initial Dublin run.

The Gaels tied it up in the fifth stanza.

Gordon opened with a single. Then Mays, Hardy and Mark Martin walked to bring in one run. Downing lined a single and Fred Tunnicliff added another for the third Grizzly run of the stanza.

California took a brief and apparently safe lead in the top of the seventh.

Tye walked, Laurie sacrificed him to second but Bret Cary grounded out to third. A walk and an infield error brought in the go-ahead run.

Bret Cary, now 2-0 for the season, went 3⅔ innings, allowed five hits, struck out one batter and walked two. Each team used three pitchers in the contest.

Gary Rader, now 1-4, took the defeat. Dublin is 2-10 in EBAL action and plays Amador Valley today.

Casper hurt in accident

LODI — An Oakland restaurateur was killed and Oakland Raiders' tight end Dave Casper suffered minor injuries early Monday when their car crashed off a river levee road, authorities said.

Wayne Shilling, 30, of Alameda, part owner with his father of the Pier 29 restaurant, was dead on arrival at Lodi Memorial Hospital, the highway patrol said.

Casper, 25, was taken to Lodi Community Hospital where nursing supervisor Eva Johnson said he was in satisfactory condition with a mild concussion and a wrist injury. There were no broken bones.

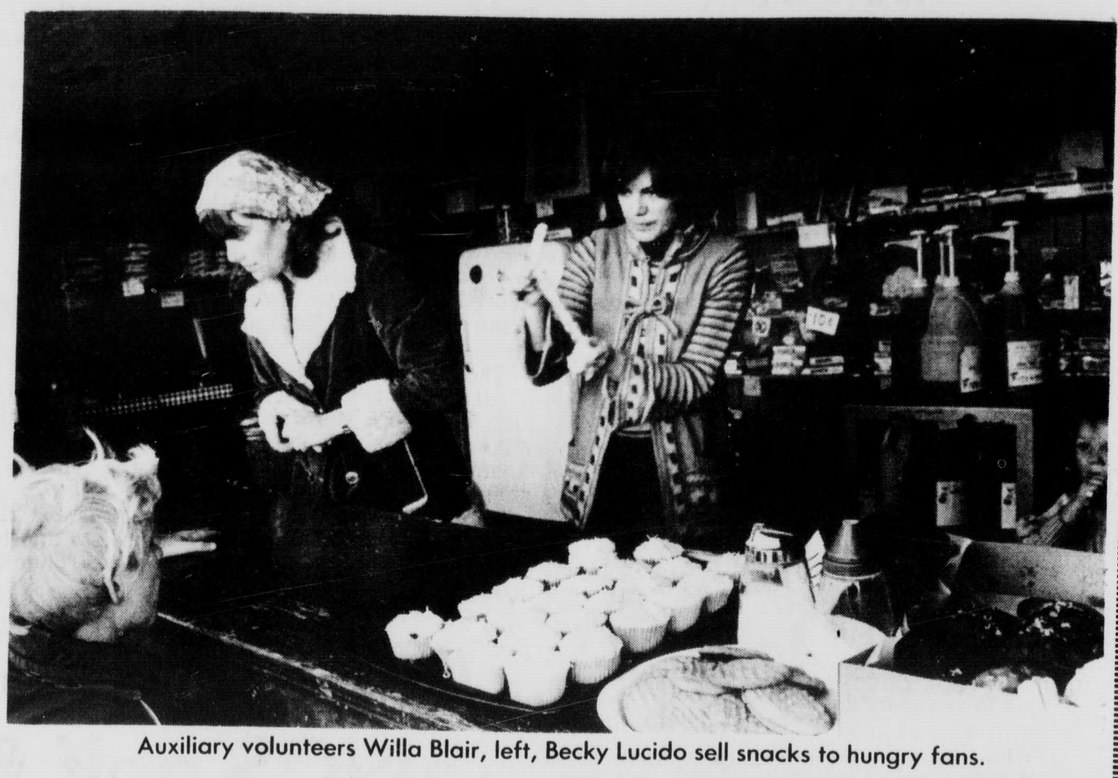

The patrol said Shilling was driving the Porsche, with Casper his passenger, when they missed a curve on Brannan Island Road and rolled off the levee into a field at 2:42 a.m.

Little League: Some work, lots of play

Ballgame mania is here again for thousands of Valley Little League players and the hundreds of adults who pitch in to make a big season possible.

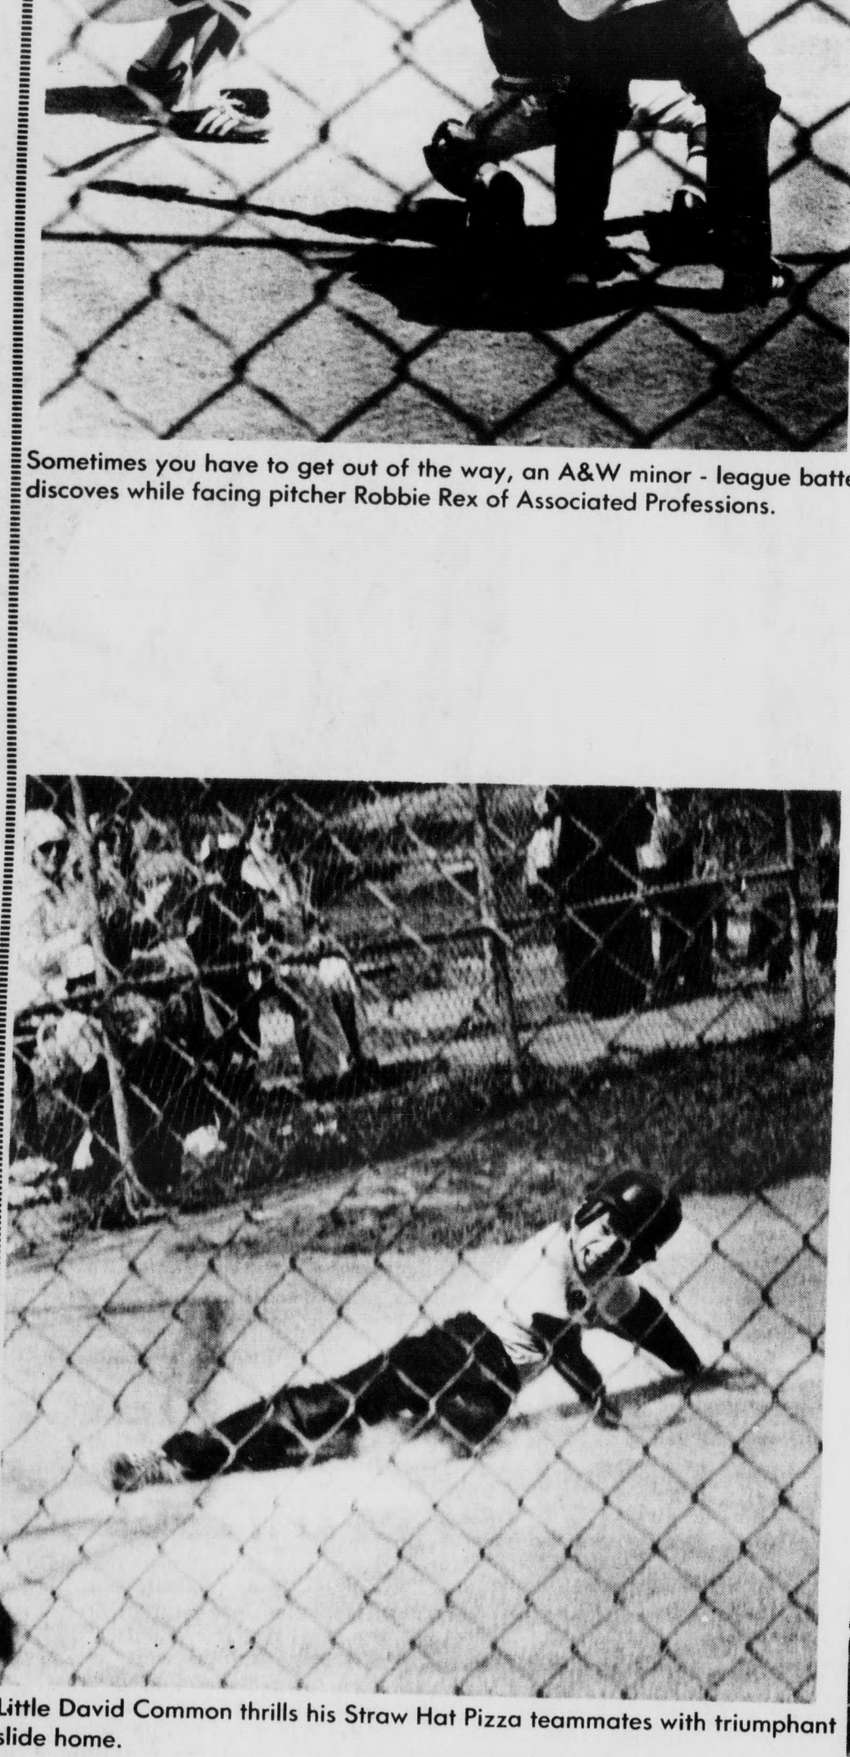

Typical is Livermore National Little League, one of the city's three leagues. Nearly 400 boys (there was one girl last year) troop down to the ballfields at Rincon Avenue School and Livermore High, usually twice a week, in their colorful LNLL uniforms for games. Then there are hours of weekday practice in the waning twilight after the all - volunteer coaching force drag themselves home from work.

Livermore National boasts seven farm division teams, five minors, seven majors and six seniors. Working with the boys are at least two adults, a manager and a coach. Not to mention a safety officer — Bob Chapman — and umpiring chief Chet Thompson, who manages to schedule his 46 umps (including one lady, Jan Haufler) to cover all 22 games played each week.

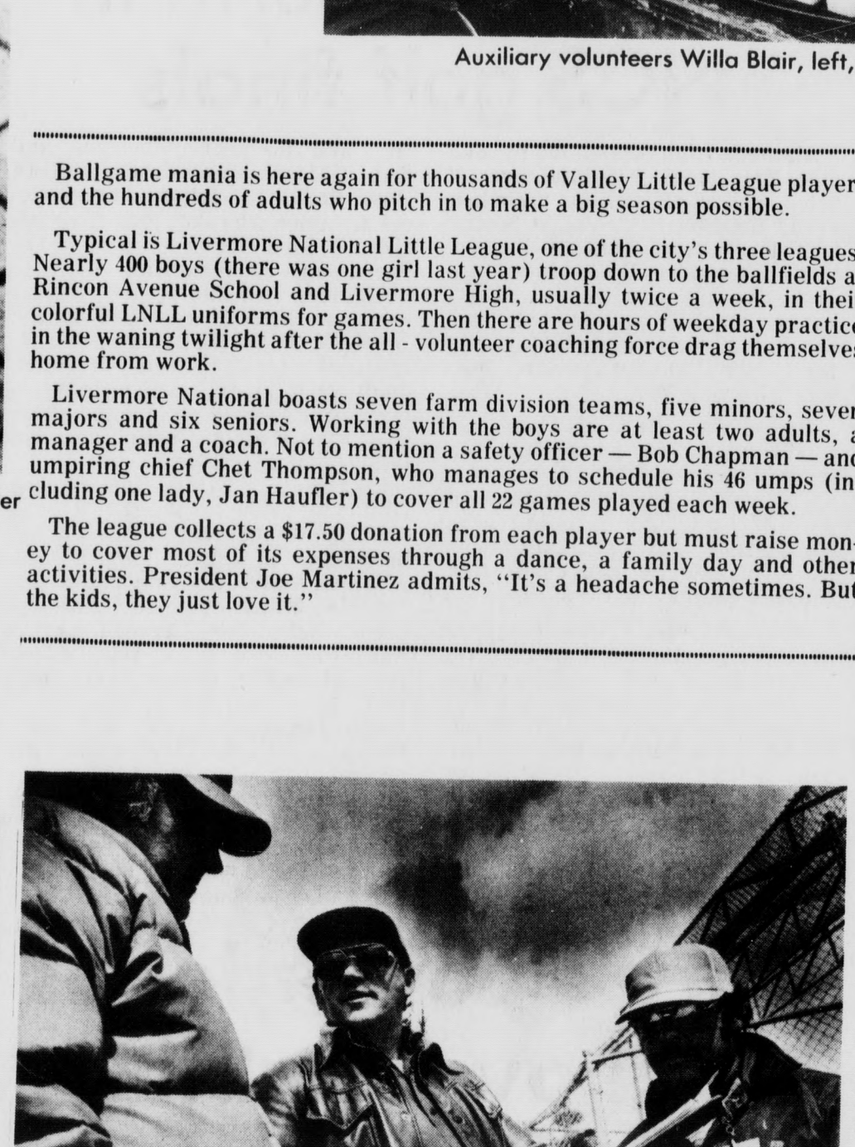

The league collects a $17.50 donation from each player but must raise money to cover most of its expenses through a dance, a family day and other activities. President Joe Martinez admits, "It's a headache sometimes. But the kids, they just love it."

It's the time of the year to buy the car of the year.

Every now and then it happens. A car comes along that does everything right. It looks right. It feels right. And it has the right combination of economy, efficiency, and value for the times.

It happened this year in the New Chevrolet.

Not only was it named Motor Trend's Car of the Year, but you made it California's best-selling full-size car. And right now, California Chevy Dealers are celebrating.

We call the celebration the Chevrolet California Classic —it's happening now 'til June 30. And during this brief period we'll be getting an additional stock of over 2,000 New Chevrolets. That's 2,000 above our normal allotment.

What does this mean to you? First, it means you can find exactly the model, style and color you want. Second, it means your local Chevy Dealer is going to be anxious to make additional sales—you get the picture.

Just one more thing. By finding the right combination of more fuel efficiency, more economy, and more interior space —the New Chevrolet has changed forever the direction American cars will take.

Dr. Joyce Brothers

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: My son is a junior in college and he, as well as his mother and I, were very upset because he failed to make the basketball team last semester. I was so disturbed by this that I'm seriously considering sending him to a different school in September. I played football when I was in school and I know the great value it had in other areas for me. My teammates and I still have reunions and I wouldn't give up those memories for anything. Since my son is getting good grades, however, I hate to rock the boat. What's your view about a switch at this time? — Q.M.

DEAR Q.M.: I'd be inclined to vote against it unless your son feels very strongly about it.

According to recent research, sports aren't always a stepping stone to later success. Dr. Paul Dubois conducted a study of Stanford Univeristy graduate students and discovered that while athletes may be big men on campus, they don't fare any better in the job market than their nonathlete fellow students.

Results of his study, which is similar to research on Iowa athletes, indicate that students might get further if they spent more time on academic subjects and less time on sports. Dubois found that the traits and qualifications needed to excel in team sports aren't regarded by employers as being transferable to occupational roles.

Parents sometimes try to relive their own lives through their children. This places a great burden on the youngster. You may not be doing this at all, but it's important to watch. You may be unaware that you are the catalytic force behind your son's interest in sports. You may be quite unconscious that you are playing too much a part in your son's choices, and he may be unaware of it too. Eventually a son or daughter who is pushed by a parent will recognize this and resent it. Do try to prevent this in your son.

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: Is it possible to inherit a sense of humor? Everybody in my family has a good sense of humor. My mother says we had even when we were little kids. Is this possible? I thought you had to be pretty old before you could appreciate a joke. I also would like to know what the chances are of my being a comedienne when I grow up. I ask this because I'm a girl. — H.T.

DEAR H.T.: I don't believe humor is inherited through genes. It is, however, passed on by environment. We imitate our parents and learn from them. You're fortunate to be part of such a family. Incidentally, humor develops very early. Little children can have a sense of humor, although they laugh at different things.

Being a female shouldn't stop anyone these days. If you want to be a comedienne, don't let being feminine get in your way. I think by the time you've completed school, including college, the situation for female comics will be greatly improved over what it is today.

Women's roles in society are changing rapidly and audiences are beginning to realize that women can be assertive and humorous and still be very much women. A study of female stand-up comics noted that successful comediennes have a lot in common. They have above - average intelligence, come mostly from working - class families, feel closer to their fathers than mothers, have outgoing personalities and tend not to marry as much as their male counterparts.

According to Dr. Samuel Janus and Dr. Barbara Bess, the reason only 12 per cent of the full - time comics are women is that to control the audience, you have to be able to assert yourself. In the past, this was not considered acceptable in women. Now it is. Things are changing.

Johnny Wonder's QUESTION CORNER

Q. "WHEN WERE PRETZELS FIRST MADE?"

LORI SOKOLSKY
PITTSBURGH, PA

A. PRETZELS WERE FIRST MADE FOR RELIGIOUS PURPOSES BY THE EARLY ROMAN CHRISTIANS. THE TWISTED PRETZEL WAS SHAPED TO REPRESENT THE CROSSED ARMS OF A CHILD PRAYING.

When you snack on a pretzel, you are eating a kind of biscuit. It is brittle and twisted, with a glazed, salted surface.

The name pretzel comes from a Latin word meaning "a little reward." Pretzels were first made for religious purposes by the early Christians in southern Europe.

It is said that priests gave them to children as a reward for learning their religious lessons. The pretzels were shaped to represent the crossed arms of a child praying.

Sometimes pretzels were made in the shape of large rings and worn about the neck before they were eaten. They were used to keep evil spirits away.

It was only in modern times that pretzels became popular as snacks.

Pretzels are made of unleavened bread, simply flour and water. They are baked until very hard, then glazed and salted. Pretzels are sometimes shaped into sticks or rings, as well as twisted into the familiar knotted rings.

Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Are there any cancer cells in the bone marrow of persons with an extremely low white cell count? Is the presence of cancer the cause of the low white cell count? Does radiation destroy white blood cells. Explain the relationship between bruises and white blood cells. Generally how does one feel when he is short of white blood cells? Is there any way to determine this condition without a bone marrow test? Please send me The Health Letter on Understanding the Anemias.

DEAR READER — In general the white blood cells are one of the body's defense mechanisms against infection. Some people have low white counts for no good reason. Others may have a low white count for any number of reasons, including the side effects of some medicines or exposure to toxins which may occur in one's occupation.

A low white count does not mean that a person has cancer at all. So you can have a low count and there will be no cancer cells in the marrow or anywhere else.

Too much radiation may destroy white blood cells. Since radiation is often used in treatment of cancer I presume that is where you fixed on the idea that cancer and low white cell counts were related. Many of the medicines used to treat cancer are also toxic to the bone marrow and may lower the white cell count.

Since white cells, red cells and small cells called platelets that are involved in the blood clotting mechanism are all produced by the bone marrow you can have an anemia, low white cell count and a tendency to bleed. The latter can cause bruising. I hasten to add that easy bruising often occurs without any change in the bone marrow or in the production of either white or red blood cells.

Whether a person should have additional tests to evaluate a low white count really depends upon the whole picture and the patient's history. Many patients with a moderately low white count and nothing else do just fine and do not warrant a more extensive and expensive painful evaluation.

By Oswald & James Jacoby

Here is a hand that caused some great excitement in the finals of the 1936 Spingold. North and South were using the Culbertson four- and five-notrump convention. Other expert pairs disdained any four-notrump convention, although Blackwood was becoming popular in the middle West.

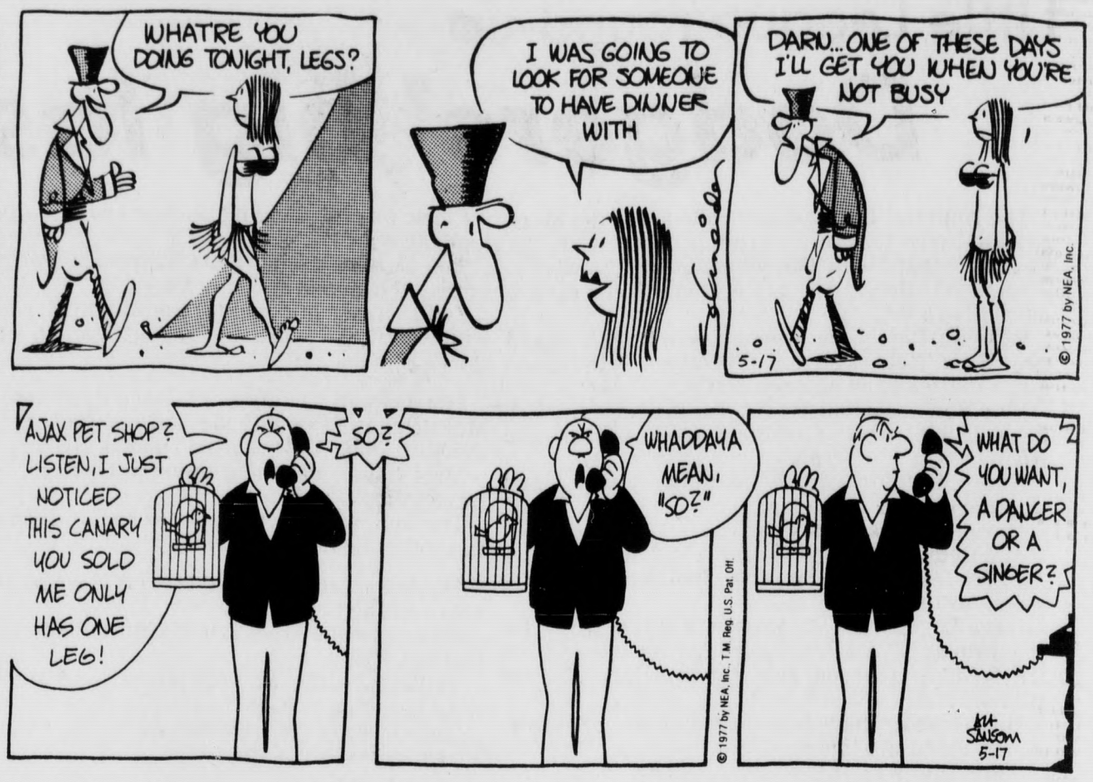

In any event, they reached seven spades and it was up to West to lead. He groaned and sighed: "What am I supposed to lead. They bid seven without using their convention."

Then he studied a while and finally led the four of hearts.

South, a great player, had one weakness. His psychology was way below normal. He looked over dummy, wondered just why West was talking and finally decided that West was trying to protect three trumps to the queen. So, South led his king of spades at trick two. West showed out and the slam was gone to no man's land.

South demanded a ruling about West's remark. He got one quickly. It was pointed out to him that there was a correct play. That would be to play dummy's ace of spades. If both opponents followed he might try to master mind a second-round finesse, but when West showed out his problem would have been over.

Carter To Be Grilled In Live TV Interview

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Television station KNXT and radio station KNX in Los Angeles needed a special audience for a special guest.

Ordinarily, TV studios mail out tickets or in a pinch round up an audience off the streets.

But KNXT's guest will be President Carter — and it wanted a cross-section of the Los Angeles area.

The Carter telecast Tuesday afternoon may be the first in a series of face-to-face encounters with the people for the President. He will accept questions from the audience of the show, which will be broadcast on the West Coast hookup of CBS at 12:30 p.m. on Channel 10.

Carter previously fielded questions from a nationwide radio audience on CBS on March 5.

"We got word last week from the White House that the President had accepted our invitation," said KNXT spokesman Ann Morfogen. "We needed 180 people representative of all areas, ages, incomes, cultures and ethnic backgrounds."

To get that cross-section the station asked 10 area newspapers to nominate 60 persons. From each paper's nominations 17 persons and five alternates were selected in a random drawing.

Newspapers participating in picking the audience were the Los Angeles Herald-Examiner, Long Beach Independent, Press-Telegram, Pasadena Star-News, Glendale NewsPress, San Gabriel Valley Tribune, Los Angeles Sentinel, La Opinion, The Register at Santa Ana, Santa Monica Evening Outlook and the Valley News and Green Sheet.

"We said we wanted the names of people who wanted to talk to the President," said Miss Morfogen. "We wanted the selection to be random and impartial."

Some newspapers ran stories and coupons that readers could fill in and return if they wanted to participate. The Herald-Examiner surveyed its readers at random by telephone and asked its dealers for names. The Star-News contacted community groups.

Miss Morfogen said it was not known at this time whether the radio and television broadcasts will go to stations in other parts of the country.

Vets will sell poppies for benefit

LIVERMORE — Friday and Saturday will be marked by Veterans of Foreign Wars volunteers selling "Buddy Poppies" on the streets of town.

On Friday, sellers will be at the Livermore Post Office. Nationwide, last year's effort raised $2.3 million. Some $1.4 million stayed in the communities where it was raised, used for local veterans relief projects.

About $515,000 went toward the operating costs of service offices for assistance to veterans in establishing disability claims for compensation and pension. Another $153,000 was contributed to the support of the VFW National Home for widows and orphans of deceased veterans. The home is at Eaton Rapids, Mich.

Hospitalized veterans were paid about $68,000 for assembling the poppies for sale.

DECADE MENTHOL. THE TASTE THAT TOOK TEN YEARS TO MAKE.

In the past a menthol smoker could only get real taste from a cigarette that's high in 'tar.' The problem of reducing this 'tar' while maintaining taste is enormous.

That's why, when we set out to work, we didn't give ourselves a time limit. It's a good thing. Because it took us ten years to develop a "Total System" capable of delivering truly satisfying taste in a low 'tar' menthol cigarette.

The Decade "Total System."
How were we able to keep the taste in a low 'tar' menthol when so many others have failed? Mainly by developing our unique "Total System" in which every part of our cigarette is arranged in perfect balance with each other. The tobacco, the filter, the paper, and even the menthol. Only by concentrating on these parts were we able to perfect the whole.

The Menthol.
Natural menthol delivers cool, fresh taste.
Take our menthol, for example. It's all natural, not a combination of synthetics. And it has a distinctively cool, fresh taste that comes from blending different menthols imported from around the world. This extraordinary blend of natural menthol delivers a taste you'll find only in new Decade Menthol.

The Tobacco. "Flavor Packing"™ plus fifteen tobaccos boost taste.
Our tobacco is also unique. Its taste is boosted by a method called "Flavor Packing" which allows us to concentrate a special patented tobacco flavorant in each Decade Menthol.

The Filter. Unique "Taste Channel" gives first puff impact.
Our filtration system represents a singular breakthrough in low 'tar' smoking. Simply, we've created a "Taste Channel" within the filter to give you that first puff impact you've come to expect from only the higher 'tar' cigarettes.

The Paper. High porosity paper controls burn rate.
Even our high porosity paper is specifically designed to give an efficient burn rate that delivers optimum taste with a minimum of 'tar.'

The result.
A completely new kind of low 'tar' menthol cigarette.
So try a pack of Decade for yourself. Menthol or Regular. And after one taste we think you'll agree that our last 10 years were well worth the effort.

Only 5 mg. 'tar.'

Regular and Menthol.
